WIGGIN DODGES $440,939 TAX AS FAMILY PROFITS $4,008,538

SHORT SALES IN CHASE STOCK MADE TO BEAT LEVY

Investigators Reveal Swapping in Bonds of Various Cities to be Bought After Thirty Days

Washington, Nov. 1 (INS)—Albert H. Wiggin, former head of the Chase National Bank of New York, admitted to Senate investigators today that he escaped a federal income tax of $440,939.18 in 1928 and 1930 by an intricate short sale transaction i nthe stock of his bank.

Wiggin said the short sale operations resulted in a profit of $4,008,538 to his family, and that he used two personal corporations to achieve this profit. He never paid the tax because he washed it out against a huge stock market loss on his Shermar corporation's 1931 income tax returns.

Wiggin insisted the transactions were "strictly in accordance with the law" and in keeping with the rulings of the Treasury Department.

Wiggin previously declared he, his family and his personal corporation paid a total of $4,624,905.38, including $3,494,027.80 in Federal Income taxes from 1928 to 1932. His highest personal income tax was $358,092 in 1928.

Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, also developed how employes of the Chase Bank advised customers how to avoid and reduce their Federal Income taxes in 1932. Wiggin defended the practice as "good salesmanship."

ADVICE ON TAX DODGING

Pecora produced a copy of a letter from the files of the Chase Bank, telling one customer the company wanted to "help our customers get around the income tax law.

Albert H. Wiggin

The letter was initialed "R. W. M." and addressed to William Mitchell, Kendall, at 101 Park ave., New York City.

Wiggin, former head of the Chase Bank, declared he knew nothing about the letter. He identified the writer as "probably a salesman for the corporation."

Pecora charged that the scheme outlined was to "create more paper losses," in order to reduce income taxes.

"Wasn't that taking advantage of the government?"

"Oh, no," replied Wiggin.

"But you took advantage of the government by setting up your freak Canadian corporations to enable you and your family corporations to reduce their taxes?"

"I don't consider it taking advantage of the government."

LETTER REVEALS SCHEME

A letter written July 5, 1932, and signed "Chase Harris Forbes Corp., by P." outlined in greater detail the amazing "tax dodging service."

This letter was addressed to Carl M. Bernegau, vice-president and treasurer of the Kauffel & Esser Co., Hoboken, N. J.

After explaining that "full loss" still could be deducted under the new law from the sale of government and municipal bonds, it declared:

"Many municipal bonds such as the obligations of New York city, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, etc., are selling at prices which permit of establishing a relatively substantial loss. In the case of almost all these cities, their obligations have serial maturities, so that it would be possible to make an exchange without affecting the security of your investment in the slightest degree, and with only a slight change in the maturity date."

Pecora produced a memorandum from the Chase files showing Charles E. Keaton of the Hamilton Trust Co. had sold bank stock in 1931 to record an income tax loss, puth the purpose of buying it back 30 days later. This scheme Wiggin declared a "very common practice."

SELL FOR REPURCHASE

The memo, signed by G. A. Kinney, dated "12-18-31," and addressed to "Mr. Inglesby," read:

"Please sell the attached 1000 shares of Chase stock in the name of Charles E. Keston at the market. Check to his order to be mailed to him at Hempstead, L. I.

"Mr. Keston is a member of the advisory board of the Hamilton Trust branch and is taking a loss for tax purposes with the intention of repurchasing after 30 days."

Pecora next delved into Wiggin's short sales operations in Chase stock. The banker reported selling short 42,506 shares between Sept. 23, and Nov. 4, 1929. The first short sale was at $220, with the second at $280. Other prices were $257, $245 and $260, before the October crash and at $225 $180 and $190 after the crash. The last sale was at $190 on Nov. 4.

'U.S. Must Control Its Bank Plan'

(Copyright, 1933, by the Associated Press)

Oxford, England, Nov. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt's program of controlling the currency will be fruitless unless he controls the banking system of the United States as well, Professor Frederick Soddy, noted scientist and economist of Oxford University, said today.

"Democracy can not afford to leave the power of issue of money in the hands of any one but its own government," said Professor Soddy, who blames what he calls the wrecking of scientific civilization on the money system.

"It is impossible to keep the value of money constant if you allow people to issue and destroy it as a business," he added.

Curley Gets Italian Cavalryman's Poem

Capt. P. G. Chiapparelli, former cavalry officer, today presented Mayor Curley with a beautifully engraved copy of the poem, "The Prayer of the Horse to His Master."

The verse was written a score of years ago by Lieut. Marquis Granafei, brilliant young Italian cavalry officer, who was killed in 1912 during the Italian-Turkish War.

Death Car Taken for a Ride

Engine 536 beat the auto of Anufio Larcano, 45, of Natick, to the grade crossing near Framingham, and Larcarno was picked up dead. The engine caught the auto on its cowcatcher and so great was the impact that the auto remained on the front of the locomotive until it was halted 300 yards away from the scene of the crash.

KILLING OF GIRL REVEALS BIG RUM RING

538 Persons Hunted in Smuggling Plot Near Quebec

Montreal, Nov. 1 (AP)—Possibility of prosecutions on a large scale were seen today following seizure by royal Canadian mounted police of documents which they said might implicate 538 persons in smuggling St. Pierre et Miquelon liquor into the Province of Quebec.

Searching for the slayer of Maud Ascah, 15, one of two cousins who had been missing for two months from Peninsula, Que., the R. C. M. P. came across evidence which established a huge liquor combine was operating.

The police descended upon suspected centers in Matane, Metis, Rimouski, Bic, Riviere du Loup, Notre Dame du Lac and Quebec City.

GIRL MURDERED

Large stores of liquor were seized together with books and papers, listing 538 people as being connected with the ring. Four small schooners were seized.

A number of arrests have been made, it was learned, a man held at Riviere du Loup is suspected of being leader. It was learned that the coast of the St. Lawrence, from Gaspe to Quebec City and even to the outskirts of Montreal, was being flooded with the liquor which could be sold cheaply as it was not paying the high Canadian tariff.

Since discovery that the Ascah girl had been murdered and flung into the waters of Gaspe Bay, and that her cousin Marguerite, 17, apparently shared the same fate, a relentless search has been conducted for those responsible.

4 SCHOONERS SEIZED

Four schooners were found to be liquor laden and were seized. From these came the clues, it was learned, which led to wholesale raids.

Examination of documents established the presence of the well-organized combine and a Montreal lawyer today was busily engaged in going over the various papers to advise police on the next steps.

U. S., BRITAIN, FRANCE SEEN IN GOLD PACT

Progressive Cheapening of Dollar Planned to Stop Money War

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 1 (INS)—A week's experimenting with the new gold policy having failed to bring about higher commodity prices, the administration today apparently was seeking the co-operation of Great Britain and France for a progressive, orderly cheapening of the American dollar without the risk of an international currency war.

It was reported in Treasury circles—and not denied—that Washington has approached both the Bank of England and the Bank of France in the matter. If some sort of an understanding can be reached it might be that the Bank of England might become the American purchasing agent for gold abroad.

Treasury officials and George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Reserve Bank, have conferred with Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, British financial expert here on the British debt negotiations, and he has been in communication with London.

SEE ROOSEVELT TODAY

Sir Frederick and Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, have an agreement to see President Roosevelt later today, although whether the matter to be discussed concerns the new American gold policy or the bogged down British debt negotiation was not made clear. Probably both, as they are to some extent related.

How far the British would be willing to go in co-operation with Washington for progressive devaluation of the American dollar is problematical. They could not go too far, it was pointed out, without jeopardizing Britain's position in international trade by putting the pound against a cheapened dollar. On the other hand, half-way measures will not be calculated to achieve the administration's aims.

GOLD PRICE STEADILY GROWS

Considerable mystery and confusion surrounds the working out of the administration's new policy. That it has thus far failed to achieve what its sponsors hoped—higher commodity prices—is conceded on all sides. In this regard administration officials are distinctly disappointed, and some of them apparently puzzled.

The government's first purchase of gold in the domestic market was made one week ago today. An arbitrary price of $31.36 per ounce was set, which was $10.69 above the century-old statutory price of $20.67.

On six successive days thereafter the price was gradually and cautiously increased until yesterday's quotation was $32.12, or a rise of 76 cents in a week.

At first the commodity markets responded to the new policy. Later they slumped off, and are still in a state of slump, despite the successive increases.

London, Nov. 1 (AP)—The United States dollar depreciated two and three-eighths cents in relation to the pound in the first quarter hour's trading in London today.

It opened at $4.78⅛ to the pound compared to the overnight figure of $4.75⅝, later weakening to $4.79¼, and finally closing at the opening price.

Gold currencies strengthened.

Buy Things Is Advice Given to Investor

By RALPH F. WARD
Economist of Brookings Institution
Written for Universal Service
Washington, Nov. 1—Buy things—tangible things.

This is my advice to the puzzled investor of moderate means.

The man who gets a home and the conveniences and comforts which belong with it has about the best things he can get hold of. These tangible things are real values.

The most important thing in investing in securities is a knowledge of management, and frequently bankers and investment experts are unable to informe themselves accurately on this subject. How much more difficult it is, therefore, for the average man.

So, buy a home, and other things which make a home worthwhile. Buy a few engravings for the walls, they will give you a good return—better than many stocks being sold.

Of course, there is the tax question, but you will have to pay rent if you don't have a home. Taxes on real estate are likely to go down rather than to increase. The states are going in more and more for income taxes and the federal government for corporation taxes, which are easy to collect.

Buy things you can use and enjoy now—they are good investments for the average man.

FORD READY TO ADOPT CODE, IS BELIEF

Senator Wagner Halts Pressure on Auto Manufacturer

Washington, Nov. 1—Henry Ford is a long step nearer recorded compliance with auto recovery code today—so much nearer, in fact, that NRA officials hope he soon will be all the way within the fold even though he does not fly the blue eagle.

Since he is submitting wage and hour figures required by the code, there remains now only an official decision that Ford is bargaining collectively with his employes.

Senator Wagner expects the national labor board, of which he is chairman, to be able to rule on that point soon. Men on strike at the Edgewater, N. J., Ford assembly plant, already have conferred with plant managers. Their demands were referred to headquarters. The answer from headquarters will be used by the labor board as a basis for determination of whether Ford is bargaining.

SWOPE ASKS BIG BUSINESS BODY

Washington, Nov. 1 (AP)—Warning that government will undertake stricter supervision of industry if it does not do so itself, Gerard Swope today proposed a program for making much of the NRA permanent.

The industrial leader, as chairman of the business advisory and planning council for the department of Commerce, proposed to it the creation here of a "national Chamber of Commerce and Industry" which should be an enlargement and development of the present Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

At the same meeting, the recommendation of NRA's industrial advisory board that five of its 12 members step out to make place for new advisers selected from the planning council was taken up for action.

Swope—of General Electric—along with Walter C. Teagle, chairman of the advisory board and president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, and three others are leaving the board.

INJURED YOUTH IN DEATH RACE

An East Boston youth, who early today suffered injuries expected to cause his death, was transported in an ambulance by ferry and through Boston streets to City Hospital in an attempt to save his life.

He and two companions were injured in an auto crash in Webster st., East Boston, shortly after 1 a. m. They were rushed to East Boston Relief Station in the police ambulance, but proper facilities were lacking to aid Edward Marotta, 20, of Webster st., one of the trio.

He had been hurled through the windshield of the car and his head was nearly severed by the shattered glass. One piece punctured his neck cutting into his windpipe. Dr. James Sacchetti ordered him removed to City Hospital but said he must be taken by ferry as the jolting in the usual route might cause his death.

His two companions are on the danger list at East Boston Relief Station. They are Edmund F. Waters, 24, of Marginal st. and James Costello, 21, of Webster st., both East Boston.

Jap Bankers Give Millions to Poor

Tokio, Nov. 1 (AP)—The multi-millionaire house of Mitsui, Japanese banking family, today announced establishment of 30 million yen Mitsui Foundation to relieve peasant distress. (At current exchange rates 30 million yen is about $8,400,000.)

It is believed the largest private benefaction in Japan's history. Funds will be allotted to ameliorate poverty of farmers and fishermen and to scientific and industrial research groups for the same purposes.

Vernacular newspapers recalled that the Mitsui family has been a target for reactionary patriotic agitations largely because of agrarian poverty and resentment against capitalists' profits.

Baron Takuma Dan, managing director of the farflung Mitsui interests, was assassinated March 5, 1932, by a member of the outlawed Blood Brotherhood. Bitter verbal assaults on the Mitsuis and other capitalists marked the recent trials of the slayers of Suyoshi Inukai, former premier.

Farm Strikers in Truce, Ask for Inflation

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 1 (INS)—With governors of four states en route to Washington today to place their farm relief demands before President Roosevelt, National Farmers Holiday Association leaders declared a virtual "truce" in the farm strike.

Arnold Gilberts, Wisconsin farm holiday president, called the strike off altogether in that state, and Milo Reno, national president, said picketing would be discontinued in other states.

"I am not entirely calling off the strike," Reno said. "We will continue to hold our products in states other than Wisconsin and strengthen our membership. If the program fails of the President's support, we will be in position to renew the strike in full force and over an even broader field."

Governors Herring, of Iowa; Schaedeman, of Wisconsin; Olson, of Minnesota; and Langer, of North Dakota, were delegated to seek President Roosevelt's acceptance of the farm holiday program adopted at nine-state conferences which embraces:

1—That agriculture be put under an NRA code of minimum prices equal to cost of production plus reasonable profit. Administrator of the code also would determine the amount of basic agricultural products to be sold on the domestic market.

2—That, pending adoption of the code, the government arbitrarily fix minimum prices at which farm commodities be sold on the domestic market, allowing for a reasonable profit above cost of production.

3—That currency be immediately inflated, and that the fourth Liberty loan be paid in new currency rather than retired by another interest-bearing bond issue.

4—That government refinancing of farm loans be liberalized by higher appraisals and that interest on government refinancing loans be reduced.

5—That the President and governors of the several states do everything in their power to defer further foreclosure of mortgages and evictions until farmers have had a reasonable opportunity to avail themselves of the credit facilities already offered by the government.

6—That the President declare an embargo on foreign grains, oils, fats, and other agricultural products competing with American products until reciprocal trade agreements are completed with foreign countries.

STATE THREATENS TO SUE STORES THAT OBEY MILK CODE

POLICE TURN TO NEW YORK ON CLUE TIP

Dist. Atty. Bishop Sees Early Capture of Suspects

With Boston police predicting two new arrests in the Sommer murder case within the next 48 hours, Capt. John J. Canney, chief inspector of the Cambridge force, today was on his way to New York.

Canney was ordered to the metropolis after a conference last night with Dist.-Atty. Warren L. Bishop. Both men said that they expected important developments in the case there, possibly the arrest of one of the two suspects still at large, but they refused to go into details.

McCARTHY ANGLE

Canney said that he would also run down clues in the slaying of 10-year-old Margaret McCarthy of Somerville, for which Harry Cahill is being sought. The girl's body was found in Cambridge near the Harvard divinity school.

The Cambridge police again questioned Edward Galvin, truck driver and witness to the Sommer holdup-killing, who was brutally beaten by gangsters in a garage early yesterday, because, it is believed, he identified James Deshler as the aged chemist's slayer and to prevent his appearance at Deshler's arraignment yesterday. Police expected to visit the Viscol plant, scene of the killing, with Galvin, later in the day. He was released from Cambridge City Hospital yesterday.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Marion Rienhorn, blonde wife of a deported ex-convict and sweetheart of Marshall Bowles, who was captured in Wrentham Inn with him and Deshler and is also being held in connection with the crime, showed the first signs of a break in her unnerving contempt for the authorities. Her confidence was badly shaken when she was not released on her arraignment in East Cambridge yesterday, but held in $50,000 bail, two sureties, as an accessory after the fact.

SEEKS HOFFMAN

Deshler and Bowles were held without bail, both being under sentence for other offenses. Deshler was in solitary confinement in the East Cambridge jail on orders of Prosecutor Bishop, while Bowles was returned to Charlestown State Prison as a parole violator. Both

Under Rock Barrage in Strike -:- As Police Search Trucks for Rioters

Running the gauntlet of striking truckmen in Springfield proved disastrous for the driver of this battle-scarred truck. The target for rocks on the outskirts of Springfield, he was taken to Mercy Hospital for treatment of cuts suffered when he was showered with flying glass. Daniel O'Leary points out the broken windshield after the truck arrived in Boston. The strike, settled once by NRA officials, has broken out anew in Connecticut where striking truckmen threaten to paralyze traffic between New England and New York. (Boston American photo.)

State troopers are taking no chances with the strike that is menacing the trucking industry. Troopers Arthur H. Bruno and Albert J. Sheehan are shown searching for strikers or rioters on a truck leaving Springfield, heart of the chief trouble zone.

BERKWITZ SAYS HE LENT $25 TO ELDRIDGE

Testifies Needy Ex-Juror Asked Loan for Trip to New Job

Atty. Abram J. Berkwitz, battling disbarment in the Supreme Court, admitted today he handed $20 or $25 to William Eldridge of Brighton, who had been a juror on one of his cases, and gave a detailed explanation of the circumstances.

Berkwitz told Judge Fred T. Field he handed the money to Eldridge to enable the ex-juror to go to New Hampshire to get a job, after the man had complained of being in want.

The accused attorney denied any jury-fixing and declared he never employed Meyer W. Kettleman to see or bribe jurors, as Kettleman testified.

The verdicts of $3000 and $4000 in the two cases involved in the disbarment proceedings were fully warranted by the evidence, he said. Some time after these verdicts he met Eldridge.

"I was coming across from the courthouse and a man was leaning against the railing of the Pemberton Building," he said. "I did not recognize him.

RECOGNITION FAILS

"'Good morning, Mr. Berkwitz,' this man said. I said, 'Good morning.

"He said: 'My name is Eldridge and I sat on a jury last month in a case of yours and I want to tell you they tried to job you in that case.'

"I said: 'That's interesting. Would you mind stepping into my office and telling me about it.'

"He said: 'When I was sitting on the Katz versus Sklar case someone approached me and offered me money to bring in a verdict of less than $3000. I said I was a workingman and not to bother me.'

"I said: 'That is interesting. Did you know the man?'

"Eldridge said no. I asked him if he had seen him before or since, and he said no. I asked him if he thought he would recognize him if he saw him again and he said he thought he would.

AFFIDAVIT IS MISSING

"I asked Eldridge if he would be willing to make an affidavit and he said yes. I dictated a statement to my stenographer."

"Your honor," said Berkwitz, addressing Judge Field, "I have ransacked my office and home from top to bottom and cannot find the affidavit."

Berkwitz was then permitted to tell what the affidavit contained.

"I took the paper," said Berkwitz. "Eldridge looked very sick and poor. He said, 'You know, Mr. Berkwitz, I'm down and out. I'm sick and on the verge of starvation. I want to go to New Hampshire to get a job and I haven't got the carfare.

"If you will let me have enough money to make the trip, I'll never forget it."

MONEY HANDED OVER

"I said, 'How much will it cost?' My impression is he said $20 or $25. I said: 'All right, Mr. Eldridge, I'll let you have it and some day you can pay me back.'

"He said: 'I'll never forget you.'

"There in my office, over my desk, I handed him $20 or $25—I believe it was $25—and I shook his hand goodby."

Eldridge previously testified that he received $25 from an unknown man in a restaurant after he had gone to Berkwitz to demand money allegedly promised him. Berkwitz, he said, sent him to the restaurant.

Miss Fannie Clayton, Berkwitz's stenographer for 18 years, testifying as a defense witness admitted today that Jack Jordan was the lawyer's employe for three years and that she had seen Jordan here two days ago. The prosecution says Jordan has been missing for months, and that it has been impossible to serve him with a summons.

PROFITS TO BE EXCESSIVE AT 11 CENTS

Roosevelt's Intent Is Cited by Robart; Chain Parley On

The milk price situation as it will effect the chain stores on Friday, when the code agreement becomes operative, remained unclarified today.

In the chain stores milk has been 10 cents a quart. The code calls for a minimum price of 11 cents a quart but Director Ralph Robart of the state commission on necessaries of life has threatened action against dealers who endvance their price to show a profit beyond normal, regardless of the code.

Robart's ultimatum does not necessarily mean that all stores increasing their price from 10 to 11 cents will find disfavor with his department. He will take action only in those cases where the 11-cent prices reflects a profit in excess of normal as compared with the profit of other goods sold in the sames tore.

CLASHES WITH NRA

At the same time, he said he understands that most of the chain stores have been netting a reasonable profit at 10 cents and are themselves reluctant to increase to 11.

A clash between the emergency regulations of the NRA and state rights, as interpreted by Robart, is the outcome.

What the result will be may depend upon the fact that Robart's commission really lacks any powers of prosecution while the NRA has real teeth. The commission on necessaries is empowered to investigate facts and publish its findings in the newspapers.

Robart believes, however, that President Roosevelt did not mean

Stenogs Above 40 Start U. S. Clash

Washington, Nov. 1 (AP)—The clash between Representative Cochran (D.) of Missouri and the civil service commission about barring persons over 40 from stenographic examinations has drawn most of the capital, and even the woman cabinet members, into hot debate.

Harry B. Mitchell, civil service commissioner, pointing out that the ruling does not apply to scientific and specially trained workers, today continued to contend it was kindness to cut passefories from competition.

"It is holding out false hope, when 99 out of 100 wouldn't get the new jobs," he said.

Frances Perkins, Labor Secretary, said the civil service knew its own business, but as far as she was concerned, she much preferred the older employe for many posts, and that somehow 40 and 50 didn't seem old to her. She is 51.

HOLLAND GOAL OF LINDYS

Paris, Nov. 1—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh may resume their journey Thursday, by flying to Holland, although the colonel is silent regarding his plans.

The Americans were received at the city hall by the president of the Municipal Council, who presented Mrs. Lindbergh with a book of Paris museums. They then called at Elysee, the presidential palace, and signed the visitors' book. The visit, it was said, was in the nature of a farewell call.

It was said at their hotel that the Lindberghs' mail, from admirers, has now increased to 100 letters a day.

NUMEROLOGIST AGAIN QUIZZED

Hearing of the contest to break the will of the late Mrs. Helen M. Pike, of Brookline, which left $35,000 to Madame Ritha Walton, a numerologist, and practically cut off her relatives, resumes today before Judge Joseph R. McCook in Dedham Probate court.

Mrs. Gertrude Perkins, sister of the dead woman, who in leading the fight to break the will on the grounds Mrs. Pike was of unsound mind and was subjected to undue influence by Mme. Walton, was on the stand most of the day yesterday, when he case had opened.

She declared that she had lived with her sister most of her life and that their relations had always been pleasant until Mrs. Pike met Mme. Walton. From that time on her sister was a "changed woman," Mrs. Perkins testified.

GAS EXPLOSION WRECKS FLAT

The use of gasoline to start a fire in a stove was said today to have caused a fire which caused $5000 damage in the fifth floor of a five-story brick dwelling in Chester st., North End, and for a time threatened the thickly-settled tenement district there.

The gasoline exploded and the flames spread rapidly through the fifth floor apartment, occupied by Salvatore Pateman. Firemen, after a hard battle, confined the flames to the one floor.

Judge Gives Biting Dog 'Life' in Yard

White Lake, N. Y., Nov. 1 (INS)—When a dog bites a man it's not news—so they say!

But when they arrest the dog and try him before a jury and a judge it must rate some attention.

Anyhow, Farmer Sutton's dog Rex, known as the "canine means of Widow Meyer Mountain," today was the first animal to be so tried and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Magistrate Countryman sentenced the dog to spend the rest of his life in close confinement in his master's back yard.

Toothache 'Cure' Costs Man His Life

Worcester, Nov. 1—A toothache cost the life of John J. Dowd, 27, here today. His suffering was so great that he carelessly applied an overdose of medicine containing carbolic acid in search of relief. He inadvertently swallowed some and it killed him. Two years ago his father was killed by a fall from a wagon.

'Hard Luck' Story Swindler of Girl Gets 2 Years

Kirkland Stevens, 28-year-old Lechmvar from out of the West, was found guilty of larceny from a girl friend, Waltham beauty parlor proprietor, and from the typewriter concern by which he was employed, in municipal court today, and drew a two-year sentence in the House of Correction. He appealed.

Miss Mary Therrien, also 28, owner of the Old Gold Beauty Shop, however was not in court for the sentencing of the man to whom she gave $102 to help him get an increase in salary.

Nor did the young man himself take the stand in his own defense.

According to Sergt. Francis W. Russell, who arrested Stevens Oct. 14, the defendant obtained 20 typewriters from the L. C. Smith and Corona Corp., Chauncey st., by means of fraudulent sales slips after which he pawned them and kept the cash.

A few weeks before his arrest Stevens went to Miss Therrien, whom he had known for about a month, according to the police, and pleaded with her to buy two typewriters at $45 and $60 each, that he might maintain his quota as leading salesman for the firm. It would serve also to get him a $12 weekly increase, he told her.

He promised to buy them back when he could dispose of them elsewhere, police said. She believed his story, it was testified, and gave him $102.

And the girl added that was the last she saw of him.

Sergt. Russell told the court that Stevens telephoned Miss Therrien and asked her to furnish bail for his release when he was taken into custody. This the girl refused to do.

Stevens gave the police two addresses in Colorado, both of which proved false.

HARVARD PAPER CRITICIZED

The Harvard Crimson editorial, criticising the Cambridge NRA parade, was scored by Alfred Bushnell Hart, professor-emeritus at the University, in a letter to Mayor Richard M. Russell, in which he also endorsed the latter's candidacy for re-election.

The Hart letter declared that in his undergraduate days the college paper was just that and not a "small edition of a daily thriller."

A. R. Whiteside, deputy administrator of the silk code, today revealed the selection. SHIPPERS SIGN WAGE PACT

New York, Nov. 1—An agreement has been reached between the International Longshoremen's Association and the shippers, who have been negotiating since last September 1.

By the agreement, effective until Sept. 31, 1934, longshoremen will be paid 85 cents an hour for a 44-hour week with $1.20 an hour for overtime and holiday work. This is an increase of 10 cents an hour over the old wage scale. The pay of checkers will be raised to $6.50 a day from $5.75 with $1.20 instead of $1.10 for overtime.

The agreement will affect every port from Portland, Me., to Hampton Roads, Va., and about 30,000 longshoremen and checkers will be benefited. It does not apply to the coastwise line.

This Big, Bad Wolf Starves in Well

Mountain Lake, Minn., Nov. 1 (AP)—The three little pigs needn't be afraid any more.

The big bad wolf is dead.

He fell into an abandoned well on the H. A. Olfert farm near here and died of starvation.

P. S. To the pigs: Olfert collected a bounty of $24.80 on the B. B. W.

3 HELD IN GAMING RAID

Haverhill, Nov. 1—Three men seized here yesterday in a raid on an elaborate horse racing book were to be arraigned in District court today. They are John J. Poole, Walter J. O'Brien and Morris M. Landry. All are charged with being present where gambling instruments were found.

The raiders were led by Capt. William A. Garvin. They found more than 100 persons—not a few of them women—in the well furnished headquarters of the alleged bookies in Locust st.

Most of the patrons were listening to returns of a Texas race that was being put on loud speakers in the book after being received by telephone from the track. None of them was held.

Flaming Auto Pulls Fire Alarm

Anthony Perry, 133 North st., Norfolk, parked his auto on Granville ave., Malden, last night. While calling on friends he looked out the window and saw smoke issuing from the auto. As he ran to the car it suddenly started rolling down the hill, struck a fire alarm box and sounded a fire alarm. Neighbors who heard the crash and ran to the car extinguished the fire before the firemen reached the scene.

CALIFORNIA TO FREE LIQUOR PRISONERS

(Copyright, 193, by Int. News Service)

California will join Michigan and Kentucky, after repeal of prohibition, in pardoning state liquor law prisoners.

Like Gov. William A. Comstock, of Michigan, and Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky, Gov. James Rolph, Jr., of California, told International News Service today he would pardon all violators of liquor statutes immediately after repeal "if the prisoners affected are not involved in other serious crimes."

A survey by International News Service indicated other states, including New York, the wettest of them all, would extend leniency to liquor law convicts.

Governor Rolph said:

"It is my policy to observe the will of the people. After repeal of the Wright state liquor act last year, I announced a policy of pardoning all prisoners serving terms for violation of this repealed act. At that time, I pardoned 392 persons serving county jail terms for Wright Act violation.

"I plan to pursue this same policy when national prohibition is repealed.

Close friends of Governor Herbert H. Lehman, now convalescing in the hospital from an appendicitis operation, predicted he would open the prison doors to virtually all persons charged with violating the state liquor laws.

New York state records show that approximately 12,000 persons were sent to jail and penitentiaries for intoxication and other liquor violations during the last year, but many were for short terms. Officials estimated there were not more than 2000 or 3000 such prisoners now in jail. Of the 12,000 liquor prisoners 750 were women.

MOTHER FIGHTS TO KEEP HER OWN CHILD

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nickerson, of East Boston, foster parents of little Jeanne Marie Nickerson, today were awaiting action by Suffolk Probate court on their latest effort to gain custody of the child, who has been with her natural mother, Mrs. Eugenia Patrone, of Washington st., South End, since March 4.

She produced the child in court a few days ago when she sought to have the adoption decree set aside, but when Judge Dolan ruled against her, she swept the little girl out of the building before anyone could stop her. Since then she has said that she would rather die than give her up.

Having failed to locate either the mother or the child, the foster parents went into court to obtain either an order of notice or a writ of habeas corpus in an effort to force Mrs. Patrone to bring the little girl into court and show cause why she should not give her up to them.

begins the buying that has been neglected since 1929.

That day must come in spite of all possible foolishness.

Automobile sales indicate prosperity or the lack of it. No intelligent man would be without a car, and a good one, if he could help it. It is good news that sales of new passenger automobiles in the United States, for the first nine months of 1933, were one hundred thousand units above the total sales for the 12 months of 1932. Nine months' sales of new motor trucks also exceeded the 1932 sales.

Old automobiles are wearing out at the rate of 5,000,000 cars a year. When the time does come, there will be such a demand for cars as will amaze even the manufacturers.

It may interest dwellers in other cities to know that New York is flooded with fraudulent gold-mining stocks. Everybody is talking about gold, and so poor geese that usually buy real estate that they haven't seen, and stocks about which they know nothing, are again offering themselves as a sacrifice.

The British say the question of foreign debts is "up to Roosevelt." Usually when an individual nation owes money it is up to the one that owes to pay. Conditions, it seems, change when Europe owes the United States. By the way, Brazil is postponing the payment of its war debt to France. You can imagine the indignation caused by that "lack of good faith."

SOMMER DEATH ARRESTS NEAR

Canney's trip to New York today was believed for the purpose of visiting a gang hide-out in Brooklyn that was often frequented by Charles Hoffman, alleged head of the Sommer murder gang and now a fugitive from Charles st. jail on "straw" bail. It is known that the place has been under the surveillance of the New York police for a week.

Secret indictments were returned yesterday by the Suffolk County grand jury in connection with the Hoffman "straw" bail case, and while the identity of those named has not been revealed, at least one arraignment was expected today. Dist. Atty. William J. Foley appeared before the grand jury, and is expected to be in court for the arraignment.

Dist. Atty. Bishop, of Middlesex County, meanwhile announced that he would not rush the case against Deshler and Bowles to trial. He said that he hoped a slight delay would permit police to bring in Hoffman and the other man, believed party to the hold-up killing.

EX-SEN. DRAPER BACKS PARKMAN

Eben Draper, former state senator and twice candidate for the Republican nomination to the United States Senate, today endorsed the candidacy of Senator Henry Parkman, Jr. for mayor of Boston, and expressed his disgust with the attempt of "the old gangs to force the endorsement of their sinking candidate," at the forthcoming meeting of the Republican City Committee tonight.

"The election of a mayor for the city of Boston is, according to law, absolutely nonpartisan," said Draper. "The Republican City Committee is being commandeered by the old gang to force an endorsement for their sinking candidate.

"This gang has done more to disgust all decent citizens with the Republican party in Massachusetts than anything else."

Curley Speeds New Postal Station

Contract for the building of foundations for the new $3,750,000 South Station railway mail post-office will be awarded before Jan. 1, according to announcement by Mayor Curley. The contract for the rest of the building will be let by the government before the middle of February, he promised. He said that a conference with federal officials yesterday resulted in the removal of all obstacles in the path of the proposed construction.

NRA Puzzling, Bordering on Illegality, Says Al Smith

In an editorial in the November issue of the New Outlook magazine published today, Smith set forth certain features of the government's recovery program which he believed inconsistent or bordering on illegality.

"It is all very puzzling," he said, "and the bewildered c[illegible]er, hoping ultimately for an honest test of these issues in the courts, is further confounded by [illegible] editorial suggestion in a new paper of wide circulation that the president could ask Congress to create a few more supreme court judgeships and fill them with men sympathetic with the aims of the National Recovery Act.

"That would indeed be a new deal."

Smith questioned the constitutionality of certain state laws passed in conjunction with the NRA. And which made punishable in state courts violations of NRA codes filed with some official of the commonwealth.

He commented, too, that all employes of private businesses, except the railroads, had to come under NRA codes while government workers were exempted from the "benefits of shorter hours and higher wages."

"The watchword of the business man is 'spend,'" Smith wrote. "The watchword of the government is 'retrench.'"

BOTTOMLY BOBS UP AGAIN IN "RUN AROUND" CHARGE

Ward 13 Republican Claims "Third Mayor" of Nichols Regime Had Him Fired From City Hospital Job

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Out of a welter of charges and counter-charges being hurled in the hectic six-cornered mayoralty scrap, the name of Robert J. Bottomly, dubbed one of the three mayors in the Nichols' administration by former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, popped up today.

In a signed affidavit, David Thompson of 37 Folsom st., Dorchester, charges that Bottomly engineered the loss of his job as a temporary employe at City Hospital, to "prevent him interfering with the campaign of Malcolm E. Nichols in Ward 13," where Thompson was running for the City Council.

Thompson deposes that Joseph E. Norton, plant superintendent of City Hospital, told him he must either abandon his campaign for the council or quit his job. After refusing to withdraw, he states Norton, on his way out the door, said he was met by "a friend of Joe McGrath" and on his advice went to see the president of the City Council.

"When I told him the story," the narrative reads, "he (McGrath) called up Norton and I heard him mention the name of Bob Bottomly and was then told to go to Bottomly's office at 200 Washington st.

"When I got there, Bottomly said:

"What's this I hear about you losing your job?'

"Well, I told him too, and then he said:

"'Of course, I hadn't figured on your losing your job, but you ought to know you were interfering with Mal Nichols' fight out in Ward 13. But I'll have Joe Norton in here tomorrow and have a talk with him. Come back and see me after that.'"

Bottomly "Fix" Failed to Materialize

On going back to Bottomly, Thompson says Bottomly told him he was let go because his 90-day appointment was overdue. He says he was then advised to submit his literature to Bottomly, that he would be helped out with his campaign expenses, that he couldn't win, but that after election day he'd get his job back.

Thompson states he received a letter from Col. Fanning, of Nichols' headquarters, last Friday, telling him to get in touch with Nichols' workers in Ward 13, "where I am president of the Ward 13 Republican League."

On learning that Nichols' "secret headquarters" was at the Hotel Touraine, Thompson continues, he went there, met a man named Nolan, and was finally introduced to "a Carl Terry," the "big shot."

"I was told that he was chairman of the Republican City Committee, and was the only man in Boston who could "fix Bottomly." So I told him the whole story over again, and he said he would take care of me and would get in touch with Bottomly at once. I have since learned, of course, that it wasn't Terry at all."

Hellenic Democratic Club Out for Foley

To the mounting momentum of the campaign of Dist. Atty. William J. Foley was added today the support of the powerful Hellenic Democratic Club of Massachusetts, which played a prominent part in the election of Gov. Ely.

In commending on the endorsement, John C. Pappas, president of the club, said that it was the unanimous opinion that "his experience, record and service as a public official in the city, county and state best qualify William J. Foley as against all other mayoralty candidates."

Foley Cites G. O. P. Setup for Split

In a spirited portrayal of the plot to disorganize the Democrats of Boston, Foley today revealed how the practical Republican politicians, through insincere flattery, work on the vanity of the Democrats to get them to become candidates, often, he said, practical assistance is given.

This clique of practical Republican politicians, he characterized as constituting "the greatest political outlawry in the city." Once the fight is rigged, the district attorney pointed out, the common enemy is forgotten and the "satellites" are in full cry in an attempt to tear down the strongest Democratic candidate.

"So it is that we have two men in this contest, who call themselves Democrats, but who rightly berate the regular Democracy of this city when it is clear to everybody, and should be clear to them, that they are only giving comfort to the disrupting influence of the Republican schemers."

He charged that Frederick W. Mansfield, "backslider and willing tool of the Goo Goo's" has sold out the Democratic party for "a few pieces of silver and the crumbs that fall from the table of Democratic enemies. O'Connell, he visioned, as suffering from "delusions of grandeur, coupling his name with immortals of American and European history, and calling for assistance because he stands alone."

Denouncing Mansfield as "a defamer of the city's good name," the district attorney contended that Boston, while having its share of crime caused by conditions following the unfortunate 'noble experiment,' in common with every other large city, is more free of criminals and racketeers than most places.

Ward 17 League Solid for Dist. Atty. Foley

At a meeting of the Ward 17 Democratic League, composed of men and women who seceded from the Ward 17 Democratic Club, the candidacy of William J. Foley was endorsed. These Dorchester residents were named as the governing board of the new organization: Asst. Dist. Atty. William J. Geddis, chairman of the Ward 17 committee, Albert A. Sullivan, Charles J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Cornelius J. Dempsey and John D. Bradley. Walter Curran was elected secretary. The temporary presiding officer was John W. Newman, chairman of the Democratic city committee.

ROLAND BAKER FOR PARKMAN

The eyes of the rank and file of the Republicans of the state will be turned tonight on Tremont Temple where the Republican City Committee meets to take up the question of endorsing a mayoralty candidate. Because of the strong protests made by many G. O. P. leaders against using that official Republican organization in a non-partisan election, the deliberations of the committee overflows the boundaries of the city limits.

Roland M. Baker, former postmaster of Boston, today endorsed the candidacy of Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., for mayor.

"Personally," Baker said, "I have had enough experience with the average professional politician to firmly believe that even when they 'kid' themselves into meaning to be honest, they are far from being so if it affects their own selfish ambitions.

"If out city should become desperately hard pushed to secure credit for its needs, which is entirely possible if not probable, many, many city employes would lose their jobs regardless of the irresponsible statements of the present candidates for mayor.

"Anyone who knows me at all and my official record knows that always has been my first consideration—the employe, indeed, that I have that consideration to a fault. But I have no regrets as I know the emptiness of the average politician of such intents, except as it influences votes."

Conry Poetic Barb Hits Sullivan

Traffic Commissioner Conry, who takes everything in rhythmic stride as he defies Police Commissioner Hultman's attempts to oust him from headquarters, disposed of Judge Michael H. Sullivan, mayoralty candidate, in just eight line of verse today.

Taking cognizance of Judge Sullivan's attack of yesterday, characterizing him as a political buffoon, Conry dashed off the following in jig time without even consulting his rhyming dictionary:

Mike Sullivan the saturnine,
Devoid of wit and humor,
Securely placed at end of line
Eats echoes of wild rumor.

The solemn judge will never budge
From the glacial period thinkers.
The judicial gown aside is thrown
To wear Hultman's jackass blinkers.

Women to End Gang Rule, O'Connell Declares

Boston's women will rally to the cause of Joseph F. O'Connell, candidate for mayor, and will "save the city from gang rule," O'Connell declared today at a meeting of the women's division of the O'Connell-for-Mayor committee at the Hotel Westminster.

"The women of Boston are going to decide this campaign," he asserted. "The trend in O'Connell is actuated by the women of our city who feel that I am in thorough sympathy with the crying needs of the people in their home life.

"The homes of Boston must be protected against gang-rule and the domination of the underworld. My expose of the Foley-Curley-Coakley combine has aroused the city as it has not been aroused since the days of Moran.

"One of my supporters sent in recently what he deems a good slogan for the O'Connell campaign.

"He pays me the compliment of calling me 'The Candidate Courageous.'

"Let me ashure you women, that with your help and the help and the scores of thousands of other women of Boston, I will have courage to go into City Hall bee to carry out your wishes and keep our city clean for the next four years. With the people behind me, I will not lack for courage.

"Be sure to invite your friends to Symphony Hall next Sunday evening, when the O'Connell my will gather for a rousing meeting, on the eve of battle. I shall have on the platform with me Mrs. O'Connell and our family of 11 living children, all of whom are in school, three of them at Boston College. I know the needs of the home-loving people of Boston as no other man has ever known it, who was a candidate for mayor."

O'Connell also predicts he will carry half the precincts of his old congressional district and will not fall below second place in the rest of the precincts of that district.

"Three bogey men are wandering around trying to frighten honest folks into voting for them for mayor," he said. "There is the Mansfield-Goo-Goo bogey man, the Foley-Curley-Coakley bogey man and the Nichols-Innes bogey man. All are living in the dead past of political fakery and public indifference."

$22,000 Gold Find Stirs Idaho Camp

Coeur d'Alene, Ida., Nov. 1 (AP)—A poke of gold worth $22,000—a 70-day cleanup—stirred this old gold rush capital today.

It was brought to the land office by R. L. Godfrey, who has panned Alaskan and other streams almost since the Klondike rush.

He said his dredge scooped it out of Rhoades' creek, near Pierce City, where tenderfeet, cowboys, Chinese, bakers and candlestick makers, along with experienced miners, found millions in Idaho's heyday years ago.

Godfrey came to patent his claims. Then he will return to his El Dorado.

MANSFIELD TO HOLD PARADE

Frederick W. Mansfield will again invade South Boston tonight, the home district of Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley. This rally will be presided over by Arthur J. O'Keefe and speakers will include Congressman John W. McCormack and John J. Douglass.

In advance of the meeting a parade of several hundred autos will sweep through the Roxbury district.

A long list of endorsers of his candidacy is given out from the Nichols-for-Mayor headquarters. Chief among the individual endorsements are ones from Mrs. William E. Chenery of 377 Commonwealth ave. Mrs. Nelson W. Howard, active for years in the work of the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Mathias Monahan of Dorchester.

The prediction made by former Mayor Nichols that former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller would desert Senator Parkman's candidacy and throw his support to Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley, has been definitely spiked by Fuller.

The former governor says that he has not changed his position in regard to Parkman, but will, at the proper time, take the stump for him, either on the radio or on the public platform.

"Parkman," Fuller reiterates, "is, in my opinion, the only man qualified to lead Boston out of her present difficulties."

Curley Favors Foley to Aid Policies of Roosevelt

Predicting that there will be more opportunities for employment in the next six months than during the last three years under the leadership of President Roosevelt, Mayor Curley makes a special plea for the election of Dist. Atty. Foley as one in close sympathy with the aims and purposes of the Democratic national leader.

He also points out that the State Emergency Finance Board has receded from its previous position and is now going to favor the shorter Huntington ave. subway extension at a cost of $2,500,000, and a program representing about $9,500,000.

The mayor, paying high tribute to the political sagacity of the ordinary city laborer "whose business it is to know on which side their bread is buttered," points significantly to their shift within the last 48 hours from Nichols and Mansfield to Foley.

MORE TROOPERS WILL GUARD TRUCKS

will stay mobilize for emergencies this evening.

Police officials admitted the reports of an attempted complete blockade of the highways reached them from truck owners, chiefly in Boston. But the swift preparations indicated the reports were given full credence.

Governor Ely made his statement, refusing to withdraw state police, in response to a telegram from President John F. Gaelee of the Springfield Central Labor, who complained at the presence of the troopers, and also offered to pu everything in the governor's hand as arbiter.

Except that it was considerably longer, the governor's response resembled the famous reply of Governor Calvin Coolidge to President Samuel Gompers of the A. F. of L. at the time of the Boston police strike.

ELY FAVORS ORDER

"I do not desire at this time to act as an arbiter in labor disputes and will not unless the workers return to their employment.

"For the protection of the public and the preservation of law and order, the police of the Commonwealth will continue to patrol the strike area as long as it seems necessary to do so."

Trucking concerns, it was learned, are considering shipping nothing but perishables because of the halting of trucks and the burning of some. The loss in the burning is said to amount to $35,000.

The railroads are benefiting, freight platforms being busy in some cases for the first time in many months.

Boston auto dealers are understood to have ordered parts in shipment held up at Albany and other New York points rather than chance losing valuable merchandise en route across Massachusetts.

"On a result of the strike, trucks have been held up on the public highway and in one or two instances destroyed, Governor Ely stated.

"I know of no constitutional right to stop a truck on the highway or destroy it. From my point of view, it is a distinct breach of the laws, which cannot be tolerated.

"The policy of the federal government favors better wages and working conditions. Boards have been set up to settle differences between employer and employe.

"The whole purpose is to settle disputes in a peaceful manner, while men are at work.

"If those in charge of the striking truck drivers are willing to adjust differences in a peaceful manner, while the men are at work, they are not cooperating with the federal government."

500 ISSUE EDICT

Motor transportation was moving slowly and cautiously under the vigil of the 125 state troopers, using 35 radio-equipped cruising cars, as the 500 striking drivers received an ultimatum of the owners to return to work or be permanently replaced.

The situation was admittedly at a crisis, police said.

Nearly half of the forces of the state patrol were concentrated on the main highways of Worcester and Hampden counties. A guard of 25 troopers and 25 local policemen met a fleet of 27 trucks from Boston and Worcester, at the Springfield line today, and escorted them through the city to the Hartford-New York road.

Strikers and their sympathizers were out in force but there was no disturbance.

CITY AN ARMED CAMP

It was claimed that the majority of the acts of violence were not committed by strikers affiliated with the truckmen's union.

Truck owners admitted today that the losses in revenue as a result of the strike were large, but were unable to estimate any definite amount.

Springfield resembled an armed camp early today as the large fleets of trucks prepared to set out for Boston, New York and Albany. Thirty-four trucks left for New York, 15 for Boston and 4 for Albany.

Police accompanied the fleets to the city limits, where they were taken in convoy by state troopers. All made the trip without incident, and another fleet of 25 trucks from Boston arrived in Springfield early today.

Ganna's Sorry

Small comfort for Harold F. McCormick, Chicago millionaire, lay in the return to America of Ganna Walska, the singer and his former wife. to permit minimum price fixations that would allow profiteering in individual cases, he said, and in moving against those who profiteer, even while adhering to the code provisions, he will merely be carrying out the president's own wishes.

STORES IN PARLEY

The chain store executives were conferring today and were expected to announce their decision.

A possible loophole was seen in a Washington dispatch which stated Secretary of Agriculture Wallace declined to comment upon Robart's stand but quoted the department:

"It cannot be said that the agreement schedule either raises or lowers the final price to consumers. Milk for relief purposes may be sold by distributors below the established schedule."

CITES APPROVAL

Meanwhile the New England Milk Producers' Association met at Hotel Bradford to consider the various aspects of the code giving farmers one quarter of a cent more per quart. President George R. Little said a majority of the producers had signed the agreement.

"After approval of the governors of four New England states, the Massachusetts Farm Bureau Federation and the Massachusetts State Grange, this gives us such an overwhelming endorsement we believe it should be given a fair trial," Little said.

"We feel that signing this agreement and putting ourselves squarely back of it will be an important factor in recovery in New England."

Little held that the proposed increase will mean no increase to 70 per cent of the New England consumers who are already paying 12 cents a quart on delivery; this price remains the maximum under the code.

"The other 30 per cent buying from the chain stores will face an increased price," he predicted.

Formal approval of Frederic S. Snyder as administrator of the milk marketing agreement for the Boston area and of his board of arbitrators, two of whom were chosen by dairies and dealers, yesterday is expected to be received from Secretary Wallace in a few days.

Snyder was chosen in a joint meeting of representatives of dairies and dealers. Previous to this the group met separately and chose Charles G. Morris, of New Haven, Ct., and H. Styles Bridges, of Concord, N. H., as arbitrators. The latter two will select the third member of their board.

GUILD FUNERAL TOMORROW

Funeral services for Charles F. Guild, feature make-up editor of the Boston Evening American, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Waterman's funeral chapel, Kenmore sq., Back Bay.

After final tribute under direction of the Rev. W. E. Gardner of Trinity Church, the body of the veteran newspaperman will be borne to Oak Grove cemetery in Medford for burial.

His two surviving sisters Mrs. Maude Moses of Jamestown, R. I., and Mrs. Mildred Hill of Gloversville, N. Y., will be joined by the many newspaper acquaintances of Guild at the services.

PAUL REVERES FIGHT SOVIET

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP)—The Paul Reveres, organized ostensibly to "promote patriotism, advance Americanism, and combat radicalism," telegraphed a protest to President Roosevelt today against recognition of Soviet Russia.

"Please exert your influence to avoid the inevitable calamity that would follow such unwarranted action," the message said.

It was signed by Edwin M. Hadley, as president.

Col. Edwin M. Hadley came into the national limelight three years ago, charging the wedding of a beautiful and wealthy Smith College graduate to a colored dancer from Harlem was part of a Soviet plot.

The wedding was that of Dolores Ford and Eugene Newton, who parted a short time later.

Hadley charged a professor at Smith told girl students marriages between whites and mulattos were not to be deplored and that the statement was part of a propaganda campaign of the Russian Soviet to lower the moral standards of this country.

HOOVER KIN IN N. Y. MORGUE

New York, Nov. 1—After lying unidentified in the morgue for two days, the body of a woman killed in a traffic accident Saturday night has been identified as that of Mrs. Minnie Hoover Linton, 58, formerly of Los Angeles and said by friends to have been a distant relative of former President Hoover.

Mrs. Linton was killed by a car driven by Henry Wheaton Warburton, Jr., of Brooklyn, who was charged with homicide. Her purse was not found and she was identified after the tracing of a moving van ticket in a pocket of her coat.

She came here on an errand, and friends said she was rendered almost totally deaf in an explosion in the building of the Los Angeles Times, where she was once a proof reader.

daylight, and that the slow-burning mattress blocked any indication of crime until smoke oozed between cracks at closed windows.

TELLS OF PARTY

It was then hat William Carr, a neighbor, shouted an alarm to Warren Olson, next door neighbor of Mrs. Johnson. Olson sounded an alarm and then climbed through the broken window to let Carr in a side door.

Firemen arrived at the same time and soon made the gruesome discovery.

Olaf Olson, father of Warren, told police he accompanied Mrs. Johnson to her door last night after the two had attended a combination surprise party and Halloween social at the Swedish Congregational Church. It was the sort of social at which Coker would have also been active had not he met a similar fate to that of Mrs Johnson.

The older Olson told police Mrs. Johnson entered her house alone.

A more sinister motive than robbery was seen by police when they found the house had not been ransacked and that a pocketbook that contained a 55 bill was intact on a dining room table.

Another pocketbook was found, however, outside the kitchen window where the murderer apparently had left, as he had entered. It contained six cents and a paid electric bill.

Mrs. Johnson was known to have kept considerable sums of money in her home, especially at the end of the month when she collected rents on the property left by her husband when he died two years ago.

Detectives learned that she had not collected many of the rents that she had expected to collect yesterday. This, coupled with the fact that she paid taxes amounting to several hundred dollars on the 15th, would leave no large sum in the house.

VALUABLES UNTOUCHED

Anger over the absence of money or fear of recognition probably turned the intruder into a murderer, detectives said, but they would not state that robery was the motive.

Expensive silverware lay untouched in the dining room, although it was in plain view, the murderer making his escape through that room to go out through the kitchen window.

A sister of Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Anna Stolpe of Smith st., Rockport, arrived at the murder house soon after the body was discovered.

Mrs. Stolpe planned to accompany Mrs. Johnson to the grave of the latter's husband. She collapsed and was taken to the home of a neighbor.

Mrs. Johnson also has a sister in Sweden and a niece who lives in Boston.

FLIER TO FUEL IN MID-OCEAN

Cadiz, Spain, Nov. 1 (INS)—The first attempted transatlantic airplane flight with a mid-ocean fueling planned got underway today when Robert Untucht, German pilot, took off at 7:50 a. m. for La Palmas, Canary Islands, en route to Pernambuco, Brazil with a cargo of mail.

After leaving Pas Palmas, Untucht plans to refuel in mid-Atlantic from the German steamer Westfalen, anchored along his route.

Converted into an airplane mother ship, the Westfalen has been equipped with a catapult, from which Untucht will take off when he has refuelled.

Upon his arrival in Pernambuco, the flier will contact planes operated by the regular German South American air service.

Charles B. Hull, 62, of Essex st., Charlestown, died of a severe heart attack today, while working in the B & M railroad yards, East Cambridge.

MISS DUKE OFF FOR EAST

San Francisco, Oct. 31—Miss Doris Duke, "the world's richest girl," slipped out of San Francisco today. The only child of the late James B. Duke, multi-millionaire tobacco king, boarded the plane of her step-brother, Walker P. Inman of New York, at Mills Field, and headed East with Inman and two women companions.

Her departure marked the end of a several weeks' incognito visit in California. With her identity closely guarded she had been stopping at a local hotel since Friday in the company of a Mr. and Mrs. Russell and a Walker Patterson who represented himself as Miss Duke's bodyguard.

The tall, slim, blue-eyed Doris is expected to be in New York to celebrate her 21st birthday November 23. On that day she will inherit the fortune estimated at from $52,000,000 to $83,000,000.

Hitler Publishes Cartoons to Prove He's Great

Berlin, Nov. 1 (INS)—Adolf Hitler, like Herbert Hoover and the late Theodore Roosevelt, always is pleased with caricatures and cartoons of himself, and makes a hobby of collecting them.

A book made up entirely of Hitler cartoons collected from all parts of the world has just been published under the direction of the chancellor's own spokesman for the foreign press, Dr. Ernest Hanfstaengl.

The volume covers sketches both favorable and antagonistic that have appeared since 1924.

Nothing is spared Hitler—the Chaplin mustache, the Sam Brown belt, the puttees and boots, and, above all, the unmanageable cowlick that shades his brow—all have prominent places in the collection.

The aim of the volume is to show Hitler, from being a derided minority leader with a difficult path to power, has risen to become a world figure inciting either fear or admiration.

Each cartoon is accompanied by a brief comment.

"If you want to know a man, ask his enemies about him," is the principle Hanfstaengl says has guided him in editing the collection.

Opera Patroness Dies of Gas in Car

Merion, Pa., Nov. 1 (AP)—Carbon monoxide fumes killed Mrs. Bettina Crozier, socially prominent opera patroness, whose body was found in her car in the garage at the rear of her home.

Her husband, Richard J. Crozier, sportsman and president of a Philadelphia steel company, found her. Police listed the death as accidental.

Mrs. Crozier was the former Bettina Leighton of Helena, Mont., and a sister-in-law of former Gov. Spriggs of that state.

GRETA GARBO HEADS CAST for M-G-M's Feature "The Heavenly Sinner"

Gala Premiere for Leslie's 'Blackbirds' AT SHUBERT TONIGHT

Life of Lola Montez, Dancer, Will Be Screened; Radio to Film "District Nurse"

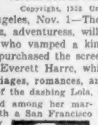
By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1933 Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Nov. 1—The picturesque, glamorous life of Lola Montez, adventuress, will be screened with Greta Garbo as the gal who vamped a king of Bavaria. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased the screen rights to "The Heavenly Sinner," by T. Everett Harre, which gives a complete account of Lola's marriages, romances, and career as a dancer.

The story of the dashing Lola, who numbered among her marriages one with a San Francisco editor, is now running in the Hearst news papers. Plenty of atmosphere both here and abroad for "The Heavenly Sinner" and if MGM plans to utilize it. With Garbo as Lola it's a natural.



Louella O. Parsons

One of the most prolific writers I know is Faith Baldwin, who turns readable stories out by the yard. Furthermore, she sells them by the yard to screen studios who seem to grab greedily at anything the lady writes. Radio has just purchased her latest yarn, "District Nurse," which is the story of a young nurse who fails in love but is persuaded by her mother to forget romance. Irene Dunne, who has been visiting in the East with her husband, is due to return home almost any day now, to discuss her role of nurse.

Seal Film Next

Maybe you never knew when you were watching the cunning trained seals that in their native habitats they are more vicious than a whale or shark. J. Parker Reed, pioneer film man and the producer responsible for the Louise Glaum vamp romances, has just sold Paramount a story, "Sub Seals," which deals with the seals as they travel in a herd. Gary Cooper will be starred in the seal drammer which sounds kinda exciting in the telling. Charles Vidor, husband of Karen Morley, returns to his old job of directing in this epic.

Offered Role

One of the greatest compliments of Alison Skipworth's career was the invitation extended her by Gilbert Miller, Lynne Fontanne, and Alfred Lunt to come to London and play one of the leading roles in "Reunion in Vienna." For a day Miss Skipworth was all set to leave even though Paramount had other plans. After thinking it over calmly, however, she has decided that Hollywood is a pretty good place and so she will forget her native country and stay right in dear, old Hollywood. Her next picture is "Six of a Kind" in which she makes merry with those two other excellent troupers, W. C. Fields and Mary Boland, also Burns and Allen.

Chatter in Hollywood

Under a third degree bombardment of questions Adolphe Menjou admitted that he and Verree Teasdale, motion picture actress, are engaged to marry. The marriage, Mr. Menjou says, will take place as soon as his divorce decree from Kathryn Carver becomes final next August. Ten months is a long time in any Hollywood life and this fact was mentioned to Mr. Menjou who said that he did not expect to change his mind nor did he believe that Miss Teasdale will change hers but they cannot marry until after August 15, 1934.

The best persuasive powers of Adolphe Menjou are being used to try to get out of playing in the Ruth Chatterton picture, "Journal of Crime," so that he may play the role of Solomon in "Declasse" for Radio. Adolphe was all pleased and everything with the "Journal of Crime" role until he heard that Radio was paging him to appear with Diana Wynyard who has the role in "Declasse" that Ethel Barrymore created on the stage. Now he is going to lament loudly and openly if he cannot play "Solomon."

A Line or Two

David Selznick told a group of friends the other evening that hot or cold he intends to go to Europe in January. Rumors persist that David may move into Radio as boss supreme. The Frank Murphys are expecting a blessed event; Frank Murphy is the expert electrician who is always in charge of all the motion picture pageants. Dear unknown friend from San Francisco: Thanks for them kind words. But I don't believe my husband will let me get away to meet you. He's funny that way. John Monk Saunders, who has been promising himself a vacation for y'ars and y'ars, is about to go to Mazatlan, Mexico, to fish and hunt. Patsy Ruth Miller, with her hair a very light red, created quite a stir when she appeared at a tea recently with Ernst Lubitsch; Pat is now among the colony's beautiful divorcees. Eddie Foy, Jr., is in the hospital suffering with flu. Vivienne Segal is in a terrible panic; she has had her nose done over and now she is afraid that she will be sent for for retakes on "The Cat and the Fiddle." What can a lady do in a case like that?

Snapshots of Hollywood

Beauty Watches Her Step

Maurice for Modern

Maurice Chevalier in his latest picture, "The Way to Love," will be featured at the Modern starting Saturday.

The companion feature for the Modern will be Zane Grey's "Law in the Raw" with George O'Brien, Claire Trevor, Greta Nissen and Alan Edwards.

Last Call for 'Dinner, Ho!

This week at the Majestic is the last for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen triumph, "Dinner at Eight," as the Boston engagement will close next Sunday.

With a famous star for every role, produced under the expert supervision of David O. Selznick and directed by George Cukor, this absorbing drama has enjoyed a prosperous run. In the cast are Marie Dressler, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Hersholt, Karen Morley, Louise Closser Hale, Phillips Holmes, May Robson and Grant Mitchell.

'Twentieth Century' Will Open Tomorrow Night With Harriet Helm in Featured Role

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds of 1933" will open tonight, and "Twentieth Century" will open tomorrow night. That, in 15 words, expresses the forecast for the next two days in the theater. Miss Harriet Helm will play the part Eugenie Leontovitch played in "Twentieth Century," and a variety of excellent impersonators will interpret Lew Leslie's idea of what a colored show should be. While on the subject, who is there to discount what Mr. Leslie believes a colored show should be?

This very nice fellow, Mr. Leslie, is unique among his coproducers in presuming to know what a colored show is all about. Having seen a dress rehearsal, I wish I had the speculators' rights. "Blackbirds," here for a break-in, will get ready to be the smack hit of the New York New Year in the belief of your correspondent.

Harriet Helm

MacArthur and Hecht, authors of "Twentieth Century," and "The Front Page," have related the story of a real movie star, with a lot of phony human adjuncts, as they wheel their way west on a fast train. The fact that the third act wasn't delivered for two years will not detract from your enjoyment of a raucous and hilarious farce.

From Jimmie Strucke, representative of Brooks Brothers Costume Company, who has viewed about two weeks of rehearsals of "The Follies," comes word that the show is great. Jimmie has also manufactured the costumes of "Blackbirds," his opinion making it virtually unanimous that both are hits.

* * *

Thus finishes the previews of this week. On next Monday night come the "Follies" at the Shubert, "Design for Living" at the Plymouth, and "The Party's Over" at the Wilbur. Which should be enough, don't you think so?

'Biggest Show' at Howard

"Going to Town," called the "biggest show in burlesque," crams all the "burley" features along with a cast of 30 and excellent scenic backgrounds. The comedy is particularly breezy, being handled by Harry Seymour and Jack Rosen.

The three Bates sisters are conspicuous, and Jean Lee and Gladys Smith have songs and dance steps. Jess Mack, Jean Bodine and Peggy Smith win audience favor. The three Brown Sisters have a clever act and Mary Wilson and Howard Padden pleased.

The picture features are "Deception" with Leo Carrillo, Dickie Moore and Thelma Todd, and "Soldiers of the Storm," with Regis Toomey and Anita Page. The midnight performance comes Friday night.

Beethoven Symphonies Featured

By MOSES SMITH

Beethoven's first and third ("Eroica") symphonies constituted the program of the first of the six Tuesday afternoon concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Serge Koussevitzky.

This short series of concerts, now in its 10th year—exactly corresponding to the tenure of Dr Koussevitzky—is addressed to an audience for the most part not well-grounded in symphonic music. Dr. Koussevitzky has several seasons attempted to give, in these programs, a survey of the great music of the past and present. During the present season, when, by coincidence, Beethoven is much in fashion, that master's nine symphonies, and several of his overtures and concerti are to be played.

A large audience yesterday—larger apparently than that of last season's Tuesday matinees—indicated that the Beethoven cycle is to be financially profitable for the orchestra as well as an artistic achievement. Undoubtedly there were many in the audience who subscribe to the orchestra's longer series of Friday afternoon and Saturday evening concerts, and who do not hear in those varied programs as much of Beethoven's music as they should like.

They and the others were amply satisfied by the performances of yesterday.

THAT GIRL FROM NEW YORK

-:- By Allene Corliss

Jerry Evans' Marriage to Eden Lane Is Shock to Elizabeth Prentiss Back Home

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Lovely, young Eden Lane and handsome Jerry Evan, a banker, fall in love on sight. Eden would not allow Jerry to kiss her the day they met, as she wanted whatever happened between them to be important—not casual. Five years before, following a disastrous love experience, Eden had come to New York. She obtained a position with an advertising concern and that, together with the income from her mother's estate, permitted her to live comfortably. Her popularity was assured, for not only was she beautiful and fascinating to men but she was an amusing companion who was stimulating without being intellectual. After two years in New York she met Jake Pearson, an undemonstrative man who aroused ardor by his lack of it. He proposed to Eden, but, while she enjoyed his companionship thoroughly, she did not love him. Following Eden's rejection, Jake disappeared. When next she saw him he was married, but his wife had gone to Arizona for her health. Jerry and Eden are finally married in New York and spend a four-day honeymoon at Atlantic City. Then they return to New York. Jerry writes a letter to his mother, telling her of his marriage.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

Elizabeth would sit on her smoothly made, bed, wrapped in a blue wool bathrobe and read these things with great care, remembering fingers. And she would feel a little warm and a little excited, a little weak. She would read the letters, her eyes fastened hungrily on words she knew by heart. They were such brief, friendly letters—such meager sustenance for a starved heart. One of them she read more often than the others—it was signed "Love, Jerry." Each time she read it, her heart contracted a little at that word "love." She would breathe rapidly and her eyelids would quiver a little. "Love, Jerry." Those two words scrawled so carelessly across a sheet of cream-colored paper were engraved indelibly on Elizabeth's heart. They had been there for six years —since the day the letter had come to her—on a bright, frosty morning, a week after Jerry had returned to Hanover from his Christmas vacation.

It had been gay, like all of Jerry's—and brief.

Dear Elizabeth: I've meant to answer your letter before this, but you know how it is—first one thing is always hectic. Sid brought a radio back with him and he spends all of "our" time trying to get London or Timbuctoo—I still have a little trouble with my knee—that was a filthy twist I gave it. But we had a great time, didn't we? You are certainly a wonder on skis. You're pretty nice, anyway, Elizabeth—are you glad I think so? Do write me again and I'll do better about answering. Honestly I will! Love, JERRY.

P. S.—Sid took the inclosed snapshot. You said something about a picture so I thought you might like it.

He had not said anything about —their kiss. As a matter of fact, he had forgotten it. But of course, Elizabeth didn't know that. Didn't know that to Jerry it had been such a brief, unimportant little kiss given mostly because there was a moon and they were quite alone and he was going back to college the next day. Given mostly because it was indicated—and because Elizabeth had looked a little wistful and a little eager—as if she wanted to be kissed.

That was what it had been to Jerry. He couldn't know that to Elizabeth it had been something quite different—that it had been the most terrifyingly beautiful moment of her life.

Letter Revised Prior to Its Final Mailing

She had written him again—a long letter, rewritten a dozen times —a young, rather pitiful letter that tried so hard to be gay and casual and wanted so awfully to be serious and passionate. Jerry read it carelessly and tossed it into his desk and meant to answer it—and didn't. But when he came home at Easter time he called her up and took her about as usual to dances and parties, and, all in all, spent a great deal of time with her. It was pleasant being with Elizabeth —it made the week or ten days he had to be home decidedly more bearable. There were prettier girls in town, but none that skied or danced or listened better.

In perfect fairness to Jerry, let it be said that he had no idea that she was in love with him. He conducted his love-affairs in greener pastures than Jefferson—and they were many and varied and for the most part quite harmless. So it never occurred to him that Elizabeth might be in love with him any more than it ever occurred to him to make love to her. So far as Jerry was concerned at this particular time in his life, all girls were divided into three classes. The ones you were crazy about—the ones who gave you a pain in the neck—and the ones you liked. He liked Elizabeth. So when he was home he took her about and was nice to her and kissed her occasionally—and always lightly. And when he wasn't home he wrote to her occasionally—and always briefly. Letters that she read with a little twist in her heart searching for something, warm and intimate and never finding it.

After Jerry went to New York, he wrote less and less often, but when she visited friends there he looked her up and took her places and sent her roses tied with silver ribbon. But he didn't kiss her any more; somehow, Jerry had come to realize that Elizabeth was in love with him, that she might even believe he was a little in love with her. This would have been amusing if it hadn't been so pathetic. And if Jerry hadn't liked Elizabeth so well. Sometimes he even wondered if it was so impossible after all—if, perhaps, he wouldn't go back some day and marry Elizabeth and settle down in Jefferson and run the bank and the brick business and the coal and lumber company?

But of Jerry had known about the pink candy box, he would have been sorry—a pink candy box filled with such bits of himself, such pathetic bits. But he didn't know.

Elizabeth herself came to see them at the bank, and at 22 she had learned to dissemble. And to bury things—deep in her heart, deep in bureau drawers. But never once did she relinquish Jerry. In the final analysis, she saw life as a fairytale. Some day Jerry would come back and find her waiting and marry her. Always the story ended like that.

Elizabeth Sometimes Forced to Face Truth

There were other times, of course, when she was forced to face realities. When she looked at things and saw them somewhat as they were. But these times didn't really count: they didn't count because she couldn't bear to have them—they were too cruel—they made life too futile and hopeless a thing. No, Elizabeth preferred to live by illusions—illusions that she built up carefully and clung to fiercely.

She had no way of knowing that one day they would all be swept away from her, snuffed out quickly like a candleflame in a sudden draft, by a fat man in a soiled white coat, leaning over a vegetable counter, handing her a still damp evening paper. She had no way of knowing . . .

Elizabeth Prentiss shifted her bundle of blue-sheathed examination papers to her other arm so that she might put up her umbrella. It was raining again—a thin, warm rain that turned the Academy steps a clean, glistening black and the patch of grass on either sids a bright, springlike green.

Elizabeth was tired but she didn't mind the rain—she liked it. One was so much more alone in the rain—beneath a dripping umbrella. You went hurrying along, one of the friendly, noisy five o'clock crowd and yet apart from it. You were safer from intrusions.

Not that Elizabeth's business was ever so urgent or important. It wasn't. Tonight, for instance, she would stop at Wagner's Delicatessen for some fresh asparagus and a pint of cream and the evening paper. Then she would hurry up the hill and have supper quite ready when her mother got in from her bridge game. Ted was out of town with the basketball team, so there would be just the two of them.

Standing on the Academy steps, struggling with the obstinate catch of her umbrella, Elizabeth decided to light a fire in the living room grate and set up the card table. There would be creamed asparagus and pear salad and hot chocolate and she would use the yellow linen bridge set. It would be fun and her mother would be pleased. Her mother was always pleased when anything happened in the way of a party. She would have liked life to be just a succession of bridge teas, soft clothes, perfumed, powdered and waved.

Elizabeth sighed, raised the umbrella and went down the six steps to the street. There was nothing fat or lazy or helpless about Elizabeth. Even in the rain, her arms full of examination papers, she managed somehow to appear capable and a little eager and a little anxious. She hurried along as an indifferently pretty girl in a blue slicker and a dark felt hat. Not really pretty unless you looked closely, because there was a blurred quality to Elizabeth—her coloring was too neutral, the line of her profile not clearly enough defined. There was nothing spectacular about her, nothing arresting. Unless you looked closely. Then you liked the friendly brown of her eyes and the quick, rather shy appeal of her smile.

Pickle Keg Serves as Umbrella Prop

Tonight she went in through the glass door of the corner delicatessen store and propped her umbrella against a keg of pickles and bent over the vegetable counter. She selected a large and tender bunch of asparagus tied neatly with red cotton tape. She said, "And a pint of cream, Mr. Wagner—and the Courier."

Mr. Wagner, a stout, short-winded man in a slightly soiled white apron, handed her the paper from a pile on an apple barrel. "I just been reading about Jerry Evans gettin' married—guess it came as quite a surprise to even his mother."

Elizabeth took the paper and stared at him dully. "What?"

"Sure—Jerry's married—married a New York girl. It's in the Courier—front page. No details—just says he's married to a girl named Lane—Eden Lane. Did you says a pint of cream, Miss Prentiss?"

"Yes, Mr. Wagner, please."

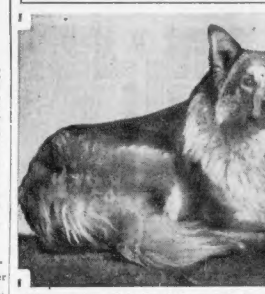
A GREAT FRIEND OF---

Miss Jane Pinanski



"Who goes there?" is the challenge of Buddy, guardian of the children of Judge and Mrs. Abraham Pinanski of Brookline. Buddy, with the exception of a few frivolous tricks like chasing sticks and shaking hands, takes life very seriously. He is responsible for the safety of the judge's two children, and feels this responsibility keenly.

Not for one second does he allow the baby to be out of his sight, and he still manages to report frequently at the elbow of his small mistress, Jane. Barking lustily at strangers is his method of being on the job. There is a general rumor that he is very fierce, although in reality "Buddy" is extremely kind-hearted. It's just a secret that he keeps from strangers.—(Jamieson photo).

Overdressing of Baby Bad Fault

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"STYLE" MEANS everything to us and each season shows marked changes in clothes. To gaze at pictures taken but a few years ago causes us to smile over the "old fashions."

Dr. Copeland

Surprising as it may seem Dame Fashion influences even the wardrobe of the new-born babe. I need only remind you of the now discarded long petticoats or "Gertrudes" as they were commonly called. This garment popular a while ago, is no longer included in the wardrobe of the young child. I am sure all will agree health and comfort have been promoted by the change.

USE OR A "BAND"

There are items of clothing that some young mothers continue to use in spite of changed ideas. Perhaps that is due to grandmother's influence. Certainly tradition is an important factor. One such is the "band" worn after the navel is healed.

I receive many inquiries about this old-fashioned piece of clothing. Many a mother writes that she has been advised to discontinue the use of a "band" but fears the child will develop a "rupture," or "catch cold in his bowels."

Let me assure the young mother that a tight band around the baby's abdomen is not needed. It is not a necessary protection against colds. Once the navel is healed, no dressing around the abdomen is required. Indeed, a tight band is more harmful than beneficial.

KEEP CHILDS FEET WARM

Perhaps the greatest mistake made by most mothers is that they overdress their children. Bear in mind that during the winter months blankets and warm coats are more essential than heavy fleecy underwear or two and three under shirts. The clothes next to the body should be loose and light, permitting ample ventilation of the skin.

If the child's feet are cold, do not rely alone upon socks or "booties." Additional blankets are needed and if necessary the baby's feet can be warmed by the use of a small hot water bag. Bear in mind that persistent coldness of the feet is a sign of some general condition, it should suspect lowered vitality from some cause.

Hats and caps should preferably be of linen. Flannel or knitted woolen caps appear warmer, but they irritate the child and cause excessive perspiration. This may lead to some skin disturbance. If a linen hat is not warm enough, line a flannel or woolen hat with linen. This prevents irritation of the delicate skin of the child.

It is a great mistake to burden the young infant with unnecessary clothing.

CONTRACT BRIDGE TECHNIQUE

Sacrifice Bid Is Sometimes Fulfilled by Declarer

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Mr. Russell D. Patterson, a lawyer of Chicago, submitted a hand recently which he states is an excellent illustration of how one can profitably be forced into what at first seems to be a justified sacrifice bid but turns out happily for the Declarer. Mr. Patterson is quite correct. There are many sacrifice bids, even though the contract is not fulfilled, that are for the declaring side the best possible result on the hand.

However, in my judgment, Mr. Patterson has submitted a hand that is extremely interesting from another viewpoint than the one suggested by him—namely, the efficacy of the lead-directing Double against a Slam contract. Briefly, the lead-directing Double is made by the partner of the player charged with the burden of the lead. It is a command to the leader not to lead suits bid by him but to seek for some other lead upon the basis of the Double. Had East and West been users of this splendid convention of plays, then Mr. Patterson would have been defeated in his Slam contract.

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢ (1)	1 ♠ (2)
2 ♣ (3)	Pass	3 ♣ (4)	3 ♡ (5)
4 ♣	4 ♠ (6)	Pass	Pass
5 ♣ (7)	Pass	6 ♣ (8)	Pass (9)
Pass	Pass

(1) North, with a view to the possible play of the hand at no-trump, presents an alternative declaration.

(2) East wants to have an opportunity to show both of his biddable major suits—hence the Overcall rather than the Takeout Double, as he fears the bidding may become too crowded for him ever to show a suit unless he takes immediate action.

(3) South shows rebid strength in his suit.

(4) North wishes to reserve the alternative of playing the hand at notrump in case South has a spade stopper.

(5) East is happy at the opportunity to disclose the distribution of his hand at a level which appears reasonably safe.

(6) West reasons that East has shown an extremely strong hand and with four cards of one suit and a doubleton in the other there must be at least a play for four.

(7) South fears that East and West can make four spades and is not so certain about his own ability to make five clubs but feels the question is too close to risk a Double. A Slam is not anticipated.

(8) Perhaps slightly optimistic in view of the fact that South has never called the diamond suit. However, North can infer diamond strength from the opponents' bidding.

(9) East should double, if, as suggested in the Opening paragraph, East and West were using the lead-directing Double, as thereby he would be assured of the diamond lead and the defeat of the contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

When is it possible to rebid a four-card suit?

Answer: When your partner has made a Forcing bid and you must respond, but the opponents have bid a suit in which you have no stopper and you therefore cannot bid no-trump.

MRS. ROOSEVELT SPEEDS EAST

Chicago, Nov. 1 (INS)—Two days packed with vital activity in launching a nation-wide charity drive lay behind Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today as she sped toward New York.

Completing her heavy program here in connection with the 1933 mobilization for Human Needs Campaign, of which she is women's division chairman, the "First Lady" departed last night.

Before leaving, Mrs. Roosevelt addressed 1600 members of the Illinois Federation of Business and Professional Women at a banquet in her honor.

"One thing we have gained in these days, I think, is a greater neighborliness, a greater sense of responsibility for each other," she told her listeners.

"There are times for women to seek out ways in which they can be of use, and then offer themselves. Men are no longer quite adequate, and we must give them a partnership instead of submitting to a protectorate, as in the past."

AMERICAN HOUSE RATHSKELLER, we hail thee! Spirit of Halloween, we hail thee! (We've hailed 'em from Harlem to the Bronx, so you're being hailed by an expert.) Hail ghosts of other days, happy days if not so noisy! Behold us gathered in the Dutch Room from all points of the compass, Everett, Somerville, Hyde Park and Braintree, to pay our respects . . . (that is all WE pay).

ELIZABETH WHEELER

Caps make caricatures of us all . . . if witches and dark spirits walked abroad last night, they certainly had a riotous time at Adams sq. . . . a roaring, screaming, shouting, banging, clanging, din of a time . . . all kinds of spirits joined in making the opening of the famed American House Rathskeller a gala event . . .

Famed for its delicious food, the lobster a la lobster was perfect . . . the floor show

My dears, we were all of a twitter . . . we mean, one less feather or one more string of beads and the Princess from Salonika would have been practically in the . . . but why mention it? (The Englishman on our left was certain he had seen the bewitching lady in the not-so-far-as-to-be-forgotten East after the Battle of Gallopoli.) Not caring for hearsay, we could see for ourself that the gal was a perfect Harem-Scarem . . . and the applause was immense from the billiard-ball boys.

Alice O'Leary, audition winner of Paul Whiteman's vocal contest, was there with the old blarney "Love Is the Sweetest Thing" . . . but of course not the only thing . . . Over in the kindergarten corner where the rattles and horns were, we imagine they didn't hear much about it. In fact, one little cutey who had lost her pal pulled off the E. N. O.'s bow tie and we wonder how much HE heard of Alice's song . . .

The pretty little ponies left us wondering, too . . . how they can generate all that foot-power and smile is amazing. Peppy, that's the word . . . peppy in a floor show that was ALL PEPPER.

Plenty of Fun and Noise

THE PATRONS PRANCED ABOUT ON the dance floor full of ginger (is that spelled right?) . . . we saw specimens of terpsichorean art way back to the bunny-hug and the Turkey-Trot and were they having a good time? Informal dress kept the feminine element from envy and everyone seemed to be out for a good time . . . a good, noisy time. A machine-gun couldn't have been heard in that crowd.

Of course, we must just whisper the wish that Americans would learn how to drink . . . noise, yes, but not when talent is singing, or dancing . . . a respect for those who are doing their best to please would impress us being only fair, only the sporting thing to do.

Evil spirits may have stalked the earth last evening, but they were not where we were . . . it was good clean wholesome fun . . . but Shades of Halloween what NOISE!

Dining, if not wining, is becoming a habit . . . at the Ritz yesterday at luncheon we watched the Hickson fashion parade and died of envy . . . not of Brook Trout. Smart daytime ensembles were being shown and Mrs. Bayard Warren motored way up from Beverly Farms to see them, very smartly attired in black trimmed with astrakan.

Elizabeth Wheeler and Elizabeth Hovey sat in a quiet corner, both in daytime tweeds . . . not that there are any other kind . . . and Mrs. James J. Phalen and Mrs. Paul Clarke looked 'em over with an appraising eye, we mean the ensembles.

In her accustomed place, chic Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons was in her black trimmed with ermine, every little blonde curl in its proper place. Smart . . . very.

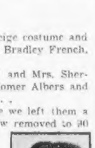
Volunteer Day at Thrift Shop

MRS. FRED CULLEN WORE a snouzy beige costume and Mrs. Adolph Leeds lunched with Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, both in new black suits, fur trimmed.

At a large table were Mrs. David Newell and Mrs. Sherwood Wardwell awaiting the arrival of Mrs. Homer Albers and her friend, Mrs. Huntington Hardwick, but . . .

We knew they would not show up because we left them a few minutes previously at the Thrift Shop (now removed to 90 Huntington ave.) as busy as bees with the rush of autumn business . . . they invited US to stay and have a bite with them and Mrs. Amelia R. Damon (duenna of the shop) which we would loved to have done, but duty called . . . This was their volunteer day at the shop to aid the Boston Children's Friend Society and as they had to go back on the job they figured it was too much like work to get out of their smocks and dash up to the Ritz, then fly back again to serve as salesgirls to the perfectly ducky things they sell at that unique establishment . . .



Mrs. David Newell

Wide Variety in Stock on Sale

MRS. DAMON AND WE HAD AN interesting chat about it . . . and we saw many beautiful and amusing articles for sale . . . from rooster teacaddy to Sheffield silver, from Chinese teakwood chests to Capi-de-Monti teacups . . . not to mention such things mundane as coats, hats, dresses, slippers, men's dress clothes, bay blankets, dog baskets, jewelry, clocks and Heaven only knows what else stowed away for some other charity day . . . it really was very interesting and the ladies whom we mentioned yesterday as being responsible for these benefits are genuinely concerned that stock is kept new and varied and that the prices are within the reach of those who patronize them.

Human Radio Solves Ground Problem

Enumclaw Wash., Nov. 1.—Martin Bodker, Enumclaw dairyman and "human radio," no longer has to "ground" himself against the annoyance of aerial waves by holding a wire-wrapped cane in a pail of water.

The middle-aged Bodker has invented a belt, which effectively insulates himself against ether disturbances.

It consists, he said, of a square piece of metal with six contact points protruding and pressing against his flesh. The strip is held in place with a girdle of insulated wire.

Couple Follow Dog to Death

Syracuse, Ind., Nov. 1.—A dog's chase after an opposum led to the deaths by electrocution of his master and mistress near a golf course at Lake Wawasee.

William W. Irwin, who discovered the bodies, said their position indicated the big police dog had run into the marsh after the opossum, and that both had touched an electric wire carrying 4000 volts.

Barbara Holmes gives her patrons a card of introduction from the bureau to the agency or person offering the rental.

In-Between Season Frocks

By Victoria Gaines

Along about this time of the year, every woman gets to the stage where the dark crepe frock she bought in the first flush of winter enthusiasm begins to look dull and drab to her. That's when she starts looking around for something light and bright to pep up her spirits and her wardrobe.

This is the type of frock that's beginning to appear around town these days—in-between season frocks in pastel shades. They call them pastels, but they're not that really—they're much too gay and vivid for that! Horizon blue, honeycomb yellow, gold, rust and green—colors that are as alluring as they sound! They come in crepey silks or light, lacy woolens. They're grand to wear under your winter coat right now, and they'll carry you beautifully through that winter cruise or resort trip you're planning.

Incidentally, these so-called pastels frocks are the first faint hint of what spring shades will be like—so they're well worth watching!

Let It Rain!

One rainy afternoon recently, we counted no less than 14 of those Hollywood rain capes dodging in and out of the department store where we were waiting for a tardy friend. These are the light rubber rain capes that were launched at the Hollywood concession of the Chicago World's Fair, and have since swept the country like a new slim idol!

They're liked so much because, unlike raincoats, they can be slipped on over anything you happen to be wearing when you're caught out in the rain—even over a fur coat. And you're light enough to be tucked under your arm in a compact package when the shower's over. Besides all that, they're decidedly decorative looking, with their gay cavalier swagger! During the summer, they walked out of the Century of Progress by the thousands in white and light colors. Now they're being sold in the stores in bright autumn colors, as well—reds, greens, tans and browns.

Fur Tail Cape

Remember those fur tail trimmings on frocks and coats that we told you about a few days ago? Well, they've made a cunning capelet of these fur tails now—a row of them strung on a grosgrain ribbon band that ties perkily in a big bow on the shoulder.

They're a charming accessory for the frock or coat that has no fur trimming—and they give a costume an expensive look at comparatively little cost.

Queen for a Night!

Here's every girl's Big Chance to be queen for a night—those new gold headbands that are seen everywhere these evenings! Sometimes they're dainty little diadems, sometimes they're pearls set in coronet style across the forehead, and sometimes they're simple gold or silver bands worn in "Alice-in-Wonderland" fashion. I'ot that they're dignified and downgerish, by any means—these tiny tiaras that nestle among mass of soft curls are quite another matter.

Modish Fur-Bearing Cloth Coats

By PRUNELLA WOOD

A CLOTH coat with rich fur trimming begins to sound like a cozy possession, despite the lingering brilliance of Indian summer days. Such a garment should not be hard to find; the trouble is going to be in the choosing. It is a matter which, satisfactorily settled, will keep a woman in good temper and good health all winter, so all the ensemble possibilities might as well be looked into thoroughly.

For instance. Why not buy a black coat with handsome fur—say mink, Persian, or sable—on it, if your last year's "best" coat is to be demoted to daily duty? Or if you have a perfectly swell new fur coat, this is the time to lay in a utilitarian coat trimmed with hardy fur in whatever color strikes the fancy as going best with casual daytime costumes in mind.

Keeping up a smart appearance is largely a matter of staggering one's purchases intelligently, and choosing colors for them that permit clever interchanges of accessories. A little can be made to look like a lot by that system.

Silver brown is an awfully good color for the double duty coat which must look well with a morning or an afternoon toilette, and of course it is lovely with any number of furs, from sable to lapin, just as the trimming keeps to a silvery brown tone. Black, brown, navy blue, or brown accessories become it, and in the matter of frocks, any old shade looks the better for it. It has that advantage over downright, honest brown or gray.

A black coat, trimmed with some precious fur, is another good all-around coat buy, and like the coat of neutral color, it becomes a second best number gracefully after a season of being the dress-up model.

Copyright, 1933, King Features Syn., Inc.

Sable dyed kolinsky fashioned into a yoke which covers the shoulders and three-quarters of the sleeves, finishing in an Ascot tie, gives the luxurious note to the coat sketched left. The model is slimly fitted and the material is an imported suede fabric which has a finely ribbed surface. Right, another ribbed suede fabric is used, but the ribs are wide and diagonal. Three-quarters of the sleeves, measured from the wrists up to the shoulders, are covered with Persian lamb. The same fur is used in a jabot collar. The belt is suede.

Secret of Good Dumplings

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

The magner that draws many men—and women, too—to a down-town restaurant is beautifully cooked, dry yet tender dumplings that are perched on a variety of savory stews and meat pies. And we've just fallen heir to the secret of their successful preparation—which we hasten to share with you.

The main excuse for a dumpling is, of course, to extend the more expansive meat flavor in certain dishes, and also to add food value. Dumplings, to be served with meat or poultry, are best steamed in a regular steamer or they may be cooked 10 to 15 minutes by dropping into boiling salted water. But most every one agrees that they're best when cooked right in the broth with the pot roast or with the stew.

DUMPLINGS

2 cups flour
3 tsps. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1 cup milk

Sift the flour and the baking powder together. Add the salt and pour in the milk and mix as quickly as possible. Test by dropping a little of the mixture into the boiling liquid. It should drop without sticking to the spoon. Hold together and keep its shape in the liquid. If it doesn't, add a little more flour, trying several times if necessary until the mixture is just right. But don't forget that too much flour is apt to make a heavy dumpling.

Entire wholewheat dumplings are delicious and wholesome—entire wheat flour being substituted for the white flour called for in the above recipe. These are especially good rolled out, cut into small rounds and cooked on top of one and one-half quarts of boiling sweetened applesauce for 20 minutes. Serve this dessert warm with hard sauce, lemon or orange liquid sauce, and then wait for the applause. They are equally good cooked in boiling blueberry or cranberry sauce, allowing a quart of fruit, one cup of water and enough sugar to sweeten the fruit mixture.

Baked dumplings are made from the same shortcake stamping the shortening and rolling them out 1-3 inch thick. Cut into five or six inch squares and place in the center of each a small pared and cored apple. The center is filled with sugar, mixed with a little cinnamon and perhaps a few raisins. Sprinkle the apple also with sugar and fold the dough around it. Place it with fold side down, on a well greased baking pan and bake for 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven, 350. Serve with hard sauce.

From the British Isles comes this recipe for real English Dumplings.

ENGLISH DUMPLINGS

1 cup of bread flour
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1-3 cup beef suet
Cold water

Sift the dry ingredients together, add the suet, chopped very fine and just enough water to moisten, (about a scant ½ cup). Divide into eight or ten dumplings and cook in a boiling stew or gravy.

The Marry-Go-Round

Don't Marry Until . . .

By HELEN ROWLAND

A LOT of matrimonial wreckage could be avoided if a girl and a man on the brink of love would take the time to size each other up before ordering the ring, the trousseau and the gardenias. And the best place to get a line on a man is in a restaurant.

* * *

According to an article by Richard Le Gallienne, you should never marry a man until you see how he pays the dinner check. If he scrutinizes the bill with the frown of an expert accountant as he grudgingly dolces out the money like a victim of a holdup, he's a tightwad and will probably make his wife feel like a charity ward all her life.

Helen Rowland

But on the other hand, if he barely glances at the addition, carelessly flings a big bank note at the waiter and says, "Keep the change," he may be a master and a spendthrift, and the girl who marries him may have to take in boarders and pay up his back debts.

* * *

Don't marry a man until you observe how he treats the waiter. To some men an argument with the waiter is just part of the evening's entertainment. If a man will bully a waiter who is practically at his mercy—don't place yourself at his mercy. The man who makes a scene in a restaurant will keep his wife's face red from the wedding day to the divorce.

* * *

Don't marry a man until you see what a cocktail will do to him. Some men become affectionate and boresome after the second or third cocktail; some are loud and argumentative; some want to fight—and some, who can "hold their liquor," just become mellow and genial and more interesting.

* * *

Never marry a man until you have found out whether he believes in working for a living or just in "putting over a big deal" and looking for four-leaf clovers. And never marry a man who BORES you, no matter how good or rich or worthy he is!

* * *

But, alas, if you follow ALL of these rules, I'm afraid you'll never marry at all!

New Hats, New Faces

It's a trick. We confess it—this tipping the head back to make the brim a veritable halo. But we were in the mood for tricks. It's Lilly Dache's newest suggestion for Resort brims and it's Reboux's Houdini "quick change" scarf that transforms a frock from something dull to something dashing in the moment it takes to button it on. The scarf is of velvet plaided excitingly in red and green.

By MARGARET MATSON

Just when the millinery mode is threatening to make us into a one-eyed generation, along have come some of the leading modistes to lure us back to the off-the-face hat.

It was our privilege yesterday to view the new collection of Lilly Dache, one of the foremost millinery designers in America, who she who introduced the halo hat—the little down-at-the-back, up-off-the-forehead concoction early in the season, when everyone else was busy doing variations of the reverse. Perhaps you have seen it. It has been a forerunner for many of the off-the-face hats that we have been seeing lately. And still it is a fashion so far in advance of all the others that not many have accepted it as yet.

Lilly Dache is suggesting off-the-face brims for the South. If one has the courage—and the beauty—she can wear them squarely, exposing the full brow. If not, she can tilt them. Many of these brims are adjustable for this very reason. They are made of double ros of belting, shirred and corded into the crown. One turns them up or down wherever and whenever she pleases.

Some of the most enticing creations, however, were the headdress hats for evening. Often the cap was invisible or nearly so, made of tulle or not like a cobweb and wreathed around with metallic bands, leaves of jet, or fur. One perfect creation is of rhinestone studded velvet, cut in sections, banded with mink, and set on the back of the head exactly like a baby's bonnet. A sparkling scarf to match accompanies it. It's called "Catharine of Russia."

There were brims even among the evening—or, shall we say, dinner hats, for that's what they are. The brims, however, are transparent and soft enough to avoid the old-time difficulties that used to arise when one wished to dance.

Velours, broadtail, pigskin satin—a rippled cire—antelope and belting seemed the favored fabrics for present use, while the more gaily colored beltings, and straw were presented for Resort wear. One beret for the South was of Chinese red loops of licorice braid, very gay, very new.

Pillows Are Sacrificed to Aim

By Therese Deschamps

One chin is better than two. Two chins easily become three "if you don't watch out"—and four chins—well, they have been known to multiply just that way.

It is decidedly better to start controlling the chins when they are a mere one and a half.

Really the good work by throwing away your nice soft pillow. Ah—what we sacrifices for beauty! However, when you are feeling very sorry for yourself—you will find that you prefer sleeping sans pillow.

Then get one of those fiendish little patters that smack away the fatty tissues and go after the chins enthusiastically.

Next step is firm contours—astringent, good, strong astringent. There are two that work wonders, making your muscles tingle with renewed life and gradually erasing the sag that creeps upon us with years and neglect.

Corrective Grooming

Some of the doubters who believe we have to sit back and grow chins because there isn't anything to do about it should see with their own eyes the results of one concentrated case of "corrective grooming."

An actress in New York felt her career slipping away. She was relegated to old lady parts. If she could turn the clock back 10 years she would have more parts, more income—and more chance to continue in her profession.

Being a very intelligent person, she consulted with an authority on this subject of feminine curves and beauty. After two weeks of diet, facials, exercise and what have you, she had so improved that she had to make up for the old lady part she was then playing. After a month you would never know she was the same person. Not only did she look younger, but she had to dress differently—and she felt better.

If we can assist you with your beauty problems, write to Therese Deschamps, Boston American, and please enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope with your inquiry.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Thank You

Question: I am so grateful for your suggestion that I see a doctor for a diet. I did and have followed it. Not only do I feel better but I have lost eight pounds gradually, and look better. Is there anything more I can do for a double chin.—Mrs. G. H., Maiden.

Answer: For a double chin—please keep up the diet and exercise your doctor gave you and add to that double strength astringent treatments for your chin.

Acne

Question: My daughter has a very fair skin but recently it has been covered with a rash that is spreading.—MRS. G. H., Boston.

Answer: Please take your daughter to a good skin specialist. It does not pay to experiment with skin disorders of this kind.

Diet?

Question: Is there any way of reducing without diet and violent exercise?—K. J., Dorchester.

Answer: Yes. We recommend diet and exercise under doctor's orders as the safest and surest method of reducing.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Glance at your shoe wardrobe with a critical eye. Have you shoes trees in every little pair of shoes and every pair of boots? Shoe trees that fit—and renew the contours of your footwear to their original youth and firmness? It is economy, in the long run, to supply your shoes with trees.

PANDORA TELLS YOU—

DEAR PANDORA:

When men want to excuse their little peccadillos, they say the little woman nags them (that for Jack McG.)

My mother-in-law is the sweetest woman I've known. She is fair and square to every member of her family. But they will all tell you she is a nag. She isn't.

The oldest boy likes to stay in bed until 11 o'clock instead of getting up and going to work. His father doesn't scold him, instead he says a few choice sarcastic words to his wife and cuts down her allowance. So when mother attempts to get the boy up, the boy tells her she is nagging.

The daughter likes to bring home unexpected company at all the wee hours of the morning, the Mother loves her to have them and doesn't mind the extra work, but she does explain a little help now and then to the daughter. When she bore the daughter to help her set the table, the daughter tells the neighbors she nags her.

Mother feels children should pick up their clothes, also wash their faces and hands before coming to the table, but the children call this nagging—simply because they hear their father tell his wife she is a nag.

Now I find my husband trying to hand the crown on to me. I find my children taking the same attitude after hearing their father say I nag when he wants to evade some absolutely necessary duty. My father-in-law writes to my husband how he doesn't stay in the house on account of his wife's nagging. So I made up my mind, if they wanted to hand me that line, I'd put the shoe on and wear it. So when they want to evade their just duties and try to pass it off that I nag them, well, believe you me, I do nag them, but it won't hurt them.

You see, I've heard some of my in-laws calling the best woman that ever lived a nag. I've heard them belittle her to her friends and neighbors behind her back, just because they wanted their own way all the time. But when they are in trouble they run to her, they borrow her money, weep on her shoulder, not their father's or the neighbor's. They dump their burdens on her shoulders. She gets bewildered by their cruel words and actually believes them. Believe me, you have to know everything that goes on in a family before you judge. I lived with my mother-in-law, so I know.

JUST A BURNING BRAND.

Dear All-Burned-Up:

Pardon the liberty I've taken with your nom de guerre, but it's in my sign—you know, plain-spoken. May I go on? Well, you asked for it and I'm telling you stop-being backfensive. I think I get the drift of your attitude. Nags seldom know they're nags. Give your family a break—start tomorrow being a real homemaker in the truest sense of the word and stop being the big policeman in the Burning Brand household. Sometimes, wives and mothers, who are as good as gold and all that sort of thing, get the notion that they are the little tin gods of their particular universe. They mean well but they go endless harm to sensitive, little children and sensitive big boys who happen to be their husbands. Don't be like that. Stop it right now. Give the children in your household, big and little, the opportunity to do a little of their own thinking. Don't run everything. They'll bless you for it, I'm telling you.

PANDORA.

P. S.—And do take that my-poor-abused-mother-in-law chip off your shoulder. 'Tisn't a bit becoming.

True Story Magazine Now to Publish the Famous Jessie Costello Story Written by Herself

THIS new True Story Magazine will be out Friday. It will contain what is probably the strangest True Story ever published. Jessie Costello, who was tried for the murder of her husband and acquitted by a jury, now tells for the first time her own true story of the events leading up to that trial.

In this strange true story, Jessie Costello denies her guilt, but unwittingly again tries herself. No stranger human document has ever come to our editorial desks. She says she is not guilty. The jury said she was not guilty. When you read her story you will feel that she was not guilty. And yet——.

All of a sudden, the impression sweeps over you that the most trivial, insignificant act in your life can be magnified into terrible importance when some major tragedy occurs.

This is a great true story to get hold of. You may have read this story in the newspapers, but Jessie Costello, herself, is writing this story. She is telling the whole dramatic story for the first time, and these are the inside facts. Newspapers would call it a scoop. For Jessie Costello, a totally unimportant woman, tried in a little town in Massachusetts, made the front page of nearly every paper in America.

But even that is not the reason why True Story Magazine has selected this manuscript.

The true reason is that there are thirty million married women in America who might have committed the same trivial follies or been moved to the same little kindnesses. And any one of whom on this basis alone might very well find herself in jail for five months and tried for murder if her husband were found dead with poison in his stomach.

It makes one stop and think. True Story Magazine will be out Friday. Don't miss it.

3.2 Music

One of this week's biggest political rallies, staged in a famous Boston hall, was just about to get under way when the committee in charge discovered the piano in the auditorium that the pianist of the evening was unable to be present.

That was bad. The pianist was needed to lead the singing of campaign songs. A trusted emissary, therefore, was sent out hurriedly with orders to get another piano player, get him anywhere but get him quick.

That was quite an assignment. The emissary reported back in a spell—easy to think it over. There, incredibly enough, he met a newspaperman.

"Sure, I can help you," the reporter said cheerfully. "They got a swell piano player over at a speak just down the street."

The trip was hastily made, but the proprietor of "speak No. 2 was discouraging.

"My pianist," he said, "is off tonight. All I got, myself, in the place," he added, "is a three-piece orchestra."

"How much," inquired the emissary from the rally, "do you pay this three-piece orchestra?"

The "speak" proprietor named a figure.

"Here," snapped the emissary, "is twice that much. Send your three musicians over to my hall for the next two hours."

It was done, the rally went big, and three-piece orchestras now threaten to become a vogue in Boston politics.

Ride 'Em, Girl

Lucylle "Bobby" Roberts, cowgirl of the Johnson Rodeo, took a temporary licking this week from a new type of steed. Four Johnny Polando's fast little cabin planespeeding here through tough air from New York in a much-press-agented race with homing pigeons—bucked and pitched until Miss Roberts regaled as the prize horsewoman in show business, was just a sick, wretched, pale-faced girl passenger, begging to be landed so she could, at least, die like a human being on solid ground.

Fifteen minutes later Polando saw her again.

"I've phoned Boston," he said, "and arrangements have been made for you to make the rest of the trip by auto."

"Auto nothing," Bobby Roberts told him grimly. "Crank that contraption of yours and let's be flying. If what I've been through already today hasn't killed me, I'm airplane proof. I'll ride the doggone plane—and make it like me before I'm through."

Not Miltonian

Although named for one of England's literary greatest epic poets, Asst. Prof. John Milton Williams of Boston University has no elevator for lofty phraseology in modern speech and writing.

Like many other educational leaders of the present era he believes that America in evolving a virile language of its own is using ages distinguished by the virtues of clarity and emphasis.

He contracted out and now orders of speech in the course of a talk to a freshman English class. He took for example the word "automobile." He showed the derivations of "auto and mobile" from the ancient Greek and Latin. Then he read the Encyclopedia Britannica, scholarly exposition of the meaning of "automobile."

"But," said Prof. Williams, "it took a Chinese laborer to do a real job in describing our machine to us in our language. Asked what an automobile was, the Chinaman answered promptly, vividly and completely in eight crisp words, 'No pushee, no pullee, but go like hell.'"

THOUSANDS PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO PRIEST

From 3 o'clock this afternoon until 9 tonight, thousands of Cambridge citizens of high and low degree and many hundreds of others from all sections of Greater Boston will form a seemingly queue winding slowly through St. Peter's Church, up on the hill in Concord ave.

There, watched over by an honor guard from Bishop Cheverus Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, the body of the Rev. Patrick H. Callanan, pastor of the church and model citizen, will lie in state.

OLDEST P. C. GRAD

Funeral services for the dead priest, one of the most widely known and distinguished clergymen in the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Boston, will be held tomorrow morning from his parish church. There will be a solemn requiem high mass at 10 a. m.

Eight members of the senior class of Boston College will be the active pall bearers. Father Callanan a member of the B. C. class of '77 was one of the oldest living alumni of the Jesuit college, and its first graduate to be ordained a priest.

Hundreds of tributes to the dead pastor poured in yesterday and today. Not the least of these came from the Cambridge city council adjourned, without any business out of respect to his memory. The motion to adjourn was made by City Councilor Timothy F. Murphy.

The list of honorary pall bearers announced early today, includes in addition to President James Bryant Conant, of Harvard, Mayor Richard M. Russell and Judge John J. Burns, a host of other distinguished names. It follows:

60,000 IN SHOE UNION MERGER

More than 10,000 members of the Haverhill Shoe Workers Protective Union today voted amalgamation with the National Shoe Workers Association of Lynn and the Salem Shoe Workers Union in a move that will eventually organize shoe workers of this district, 60,000 strong.

The vote followed nearly eight months of meetings. Similar votes will be taken in Lynn and Salem, as well as in other cities and towns south of Boston where locals of the Shoe Workers Protective Union are organized. These cities coupled with the 10,000 in Haverhill, have a membership of 35,000 in that union.

The Lynn organization has a membership of 20,000 and in Salem there are 9000 members of that union.

As soon as returns are received from other cities a convention at Boston is planned for the completion of amalgamation.

Colorado Miners to Drop Company Union

Denver, Nov. 1 (AP)—Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. officials have under consideration a request by employes of the company's coal mines to abandon the Rockefeller company union plan under which they have bargained collectively since the 1914 strike.

The strikers seek an increase in wages under the NRA code, and aid of the United Mine Workers of America. They said unions they affiliate with that organization they cannot obtain its support.

Mrs. Chaney Wills Bequest to Fiance

Los Angeles, Nov. 1 (AP)—Friends of Mrs. Hazel Chaney, widow of Lon Chaney, noted screen actor, today said she had bequeathed her estate to relatives and to John Jeske, whom she was to have married if she had recovered from her illness.

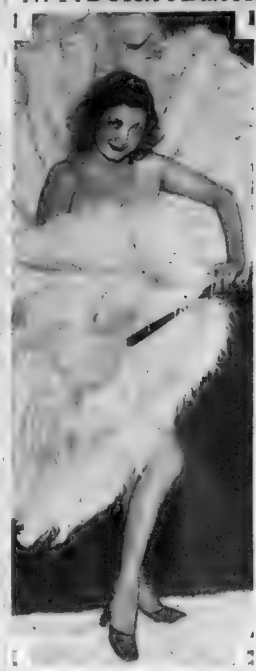
N. Y. Doesn't Ban Her Fan



Peggy Rich, who has spent much of her time in court settling marital and heart balm battles, has gone in for feathers in a small way, as it were. She is doing a "Sally Rand" in one of the popular night spots and thus far the police haven't made her affect the opaque panties costume a less effete western city (none other than Chicago!) made Sally Rand don. But, they say, New York doesn't blush as easily as Chicago does. Anyway, here's Peggy "as is." (International News Photos.)

NRA Adds $4,000,000 to Westinghouse Roll

New York, Nov. 1—The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. announces its annual payroll had been increased between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 by increased wages and additional employes hired under the NRA code.

SIX TESTIFY ON MAN SHOT, WIFE, PRO-NAZI WORK GIRL KIDNAPED

New York, Nov. 1 (INS)—Spurred by declaration of Rep. Samuel Dickstein, chairman of the House Immigration Committee, that he believed Nazi propagandists had been active in the United States for the past two years, a federal grand jury today drove ahead with its probe of alleged pro-Nazi activities.

U. S. Atty. George Medalie said he would present six witnesses to the grand jury today to be questioned as to their knowledge of reputed propagandizing in favor of the Hitler regime.

Meantime, federal agents, hunted for Heinz Spanknoebel, said to have been the chief director of the propaganda efforts. Spanknoebel is sought on a U. S. warrant charging he acted as an accredited government agent from Germany while possessing no official status.

Camden, N. J., Nov. 1—An hour after a man who gave his name as John Paul, 32, was brought into a Camden hospital with three steel-jacketed bullets in his body, state police found the body of Edward (Cowboy) Delongo, 30, with a bullet through the head, in a lonely spot near Belmar.

Despite his wounds, Paul told Lawrence Doran, chief of Camden county detectives, that he and Delongo were shot by three men with whom they went riding and were dumped out.

While surgeons strove to save him, Paul asked that his wife be summoned from a hotel.

This was done but when the woman and a girl companion reached the hospital, Miranda, a man met them and apparently forced them into an automobile which was driven away.

Doran said he believed Paul's wife had been abducted because she had seen the men who shot her husband.

GAIN SHOWN IN N. E. BUSINESS

General business in New England during September was substantially ahead of the corresponding month in 1932 the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston announced in a report today.

Seasonal changes caused it to drop off somewhat from the two preceding months this year, but the month was far ahead of any in the early part of the year, the report said.

It quoted figures of the Massachusetts department of labor and industries to show increase of 24 per cent in employment and 37 in wages during the month and said that business failures were much lower both in number of firms and total liabilities than a year ago.

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

The Tech, which is the undergraduate publication of the institute in Cambridge, is philosophizing about a want-ad which appeared recently in a New York newspaper. The want ad read as follows:

"Graduates of Harvard, Yale or Princeton, to learn restaurant business, starting as bus boys in [illegible] Times Square restaurant. [illegible] salary begins at $17. Good opportunity [illegible]."

It is said that 600 college graduates ranging in age from 22 to 30 replied for the job.

"There is nothing fundamentally wrong with a society in which bus boys are well educated, provided that these bus boys have sufficient leisure and recompense that they may enjoy the kind of culture which their education has taught them to require, and indulge in the literary, musical and cognitive interests which they have learned to appreciate. There is enough to do bus boy work and there are not enough men of employment. A society in which such jobs are filled by men who have spent time and knowledge in acquiring the knowledge for more difficult work, is both socially wasteful and inhumane."

And so on and so on. There is not more of it, all implying that the boy who has been able to pass the final examinations for a S. B. or an A. B. is distinctly superior to the sort of man who will eventually climb from a subordinate job in business to a managing job. All of which is, of course, nonsense!

The point is, that most successful maitre d'hotels, managers and owners of restaurants and hotels, start their careers as bus boys. The point also is that the owners or managers of hotels or restaurants of the better sort—not, do not mean lunch rooms!—is probably no inferior in brains or competence to the $10.00 a day graduate of a school of technology or engineering. And more graduates of such schools rate $5.00 a day than rate $10,000 a year.

There is no particular reason why well-educated bus-boys should have sufficient education to "enjoy the kind of living which their education has taught them to require and indulge the literary, musical and scientific interests which they have learned to appreciate." Eventually, when they have earned their jobs, become competent, attracted a following who appreciate their work, and so forth, they may well deserve these luxuries—for they are luxuries—despite our undergrade philosophy.

No one is born appreciating them or deserving them. Society owes nobody these luxuries. If one wants them, one has to earn them by talent, hard work and lucky breaks. If one wants to pass them on to one's children, one must work all the harder.

Traditionally, our young men are slated for positions of responsibility and management in business have started work at a few dollars a week in banking or brokerage houses. The menial work did not hurt them; it taught them the job. Is there any reason why college graduates, who may aspire to the management of hotels or good restaurants, should not learn their trade in similar positions? Certainly no intelligent person will insist that the job of supplying people with food and drink and shelter is a major, as an art or a science, to which the job of supplying them with these things to ing facilities or safe bridges or the transportation [illegible]

"EYE OPENERS" BANNED UNDER LIQUOR RULES

MALDEN MAYOR CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

Devir Files When Two Aspirants Circulate Nomination Papers

Malden's mayoralty inertia was dispelled today when Mayor John D. Devir filed nomination papers for re-election, after it was learned that Rep William H. Doyle and Dr. Clement F. Lynch, former Board of Health member had nomination papers in circulation. While Mayor Devir was filing his papers, ex-Mayor William A. Hastings, who once defeated Devir and who was in turn defeated for re-election by Devir appeared to take out nomination papers for mayor. He has until Friday night to file them.

If Hastings will run, ex-Police Commissioner Artemas B. Sweezey, who already has papers in circulation, will not be a candidate but will support Hastings, by whom he was appointed police commissioner. If Mayor Devir does not withdraw his papers, Rep. Doyle and Dr. Lynch will not file papers to oppose him, close friends say.

Mayor Devir denied a story which was in circulation in Malden today that he planned to withdraw papers for re-election to accept a position with a contracting company. He informed all inquirers that he intended to seek another term in the mayor's chair.

Because of the political complications which have arisen almost overnight in the Malden campaign, all eyes will be on City Hall tomorrow night when time for filing papers expires.

Jews In Tribute to Balfour Tomorrow

Jews everywhere tomorrow will observe Balfour Day, in tribute to Lord Balfour who, on Nov. 2, 1917, issued the now famous British declaration favoring establishment of a national homeland in Palestine for the Jewish people.

One of the largest of the local observances will be held tomorrow night at Temple Ohabei Shalom, Beacon st., Brookline, under the sponsorship of the Brookline Zionist organization, Rabbi Joseph Shalom Shubow.

TWO KILLED IN HALLOWEEN CRASHES

Vandals Fire Dynamite Car in West Quincy Yards

Boston today celebrated the Feast of All Saints in the wake of one of the liveliest Halloween observances in recent years, although the gaiety of the occasion was dimmed by two auto tragedies and many acts of vandalism.

Hilma Hooper, nine, of Hamilton st., Readville, was crossing the Neponset river parkway at East Milton st. when she was struck by a truck, said to be operated by Isadore Ulman, of Rockland st., Canton. She died of a fractured skull and Ulman was held on a technical charge of manslaughter.

SOCIAL WORKER KILLED

Miss Grace McAuliffe, 35, a social worker, of Anawan ave., West Roxbury, was the second victim. She was instantly killed when the auto she was driving was in a collision with another machine near Anawan ave. and West Roxbury parkway.

HOSPITAL KEPT BUSY

Halloween celebrators gave City Hospital attendants a busy night. Fifteen persons were brought to the hospital after 1 o'clock this morning. Seven of the 15 were women.

The most serious accident occurred at West Newton st. and Harrison ave. A motorcycle, operated by Philip Gafury, of Mayo st., Portland, Me. crashed into an automobile operated by Louis George, of Washington st., Boston. A young lady, whose name was not revealed, was seriously injured. The girl suffered a fractured skull, and is on the hospital danger list.

Scores of street lights throughout the city were broken and nearly 50 false alarms were sounded by vandals.

In the downtown area hotels and clubs were crowded with gaily costumed merrymakers.

Tragedy nearly attended the setting afire of a box car on a siding near the West Quincy depot. The car attached to the blazing car was loaded with dynamite but firemen controlled the flames before they reached the explosives.

MR. ISAACSON — MRS. RUBIN — MISS RESNIK

"Over the Top," is slogan of hundreds of charitable Jewish people who have joined in the Associated Jewish Philanthropies drive for $578,160 for the maintainance of Jewish charitable organizations throughout the city. MEDFORD HOLDS TO SPAN NAME

Residents of Medford have decided if Metropolitan District Commission fails to approve their request to call the new Mystic river bridge the Gen Samuel C Lawrence bridge, the bridge will be called by that name in Medford.

The city government passed a resolution asking the District Commission to name the bridge after Gen. Lawrence, Medford's first mayor.

Curley Speaks to Workers at Jewish Fund Rally

Mayor Curley was guest speaker at today's report luncheon of workers in the Associated Jewish Philanthropies campaign for $523,600, of which $341,297 has already been subscribed in two days of canvassing.

Louis Hellman, captain of the retail clothing stores division, who last year made the best individual record in gathering subscriptions for the drive, is already well on the way to repeat his success. He turned in his 100th pledge yesterday.

Only a few of the teams in the drive made their report at the [illegible] day luncheon meeting, which was attended by more than 500 [illegible] workers. It is expected that a large sum will be added to the fund total when reports are made at today's meeting.

The teams reporting yesterday and their contribution are: Department stores, $48,050; shoes and leather, $20,350; food products, $19,627; lawyers, $9756, wool, $7160; physicians, $4503; women's wear, $4297, and paper, $2870.

TAVERNS OPEN FROM 9-11 IN RUM REPORT

Hard Liquor 'Curfew' Proposed With Saloon Definitely Out

Old Timers are going to have a hard time getting their morning eye-openers when Demon Rum is restored to good standing in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Unless the Legislature changes the provisions drafted by its interim committee on liquor control, the new taverns will not be permitted to open before 9 a. m. And they will close their doors by 11 p. m.

This was revealed by Sen. Harry B. Putnam, of Westfield, chairman of the committee, as that body prepared to wind up its deliberations today and make public the text of its proposed control regulations. Putnam outlined these last night in a radio talk.

The saloon is definitely out, he said. While taverns will be allowed to serve liquor without serving food, patrons will have to be seated at tables. There will be no bar. Nor may there be music or dancing, which gives the night club managers a problem.

Control will be vested in local authorities to a large degree. They will have the right to decide, for example, whether hard liquors may be sold within their corporate limits or merely beers and wines. They will also have the right to issue licenses to clubs, to taverns, hotels, and restaurants as well as to liquor stores in which "package goods" will be sold.

Druggists will be permitted to fill prescriptions for spirits without any further authority than their certificate of fitness from the state board of pharmacy. Should they wish to engage in the "package trade," they will have to obtain a license.

Full authority will rest in a five-man Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission which will hear appeals from local groups and also have supervision of manufacturing, shipping and selling liquor, as well as the strength and quality of the drinks.

The advance guard of the Rodeo is at the Boston Garden. The Garden has been turned into what might be a scene in Pendleton, Calgary, Cheyenne, only the shrink of traffic outside tells, intimate one is still in Boston.

High heel boots, ten gallon hats, leather chaps, well worn dungaree, pound hand tooled and silver mounted saddles silver studded bridles clinking spurs every conceivable kind of a horse, young frisky bronco with the devil in their eye, smooth coated handsome groomed thoroughbreds for the trick and fancy and grand saddle riding; long horned Texas steers, [illegible] Brahma steers, [illegible] and sweet bawling calves, bronk busting steer riders, steer wrestlers, rope a steer in the arena lariat; herculean cowboy and beautiful cowgirls from 16 states of the West, from Old Mexico, from faraway western Canada, are all here for the big Rodeo.

The glamor and romance of the West is not gone. It is here, in staid and sedate old Boston. It comes with Col. Johnson's Rodeo which opens at the Boston Garden Thursday night.

Insull May Become British Citizen

[illegible]ght, 1933, by International News Service

Athens, Nov. 1 (INS)—"After Washington studies the documents and the verdict, they will consider my case in a different light."

Thus spoke Samuel Insull today as he recalled in his regained freedom [illegible] his defeat of the second U. S. attempt to extradite him.

It is [illegible] to say whether he would attempt to regain his English citizenship, but the general belief among his friends is that he may do so.

Should it happen, there is a hitch in Insull's freedom. His predicament is that he must remain here for the present since he has no passport, his American document having been taken up some weeks ago.

ing drawings or hauling a rod and chain, or making routine chemical analyses, will always be at the bottom of his so-called profession. But the boy who is going to rise to the top of his profession will probably undergo a postgraduate course of occupational [illegible]. He may be in training for a hydraulic engineer, or a communications expert, or an inventor in mechanical engineering, or he may be in training for a maitre d'hotel, or manager of a modern hospice, or any other art which requires extraordinary knowledge of people plus considerable technical skill. In either case he will be a better executive if he has been a good apprentice. And the question whether or not the job is good enough for him does not matter. The question is, whether he is good enough for the job.

It is unfortunate that so many of our college boys have been taught that they are above all but the most "scientific" and snooty jobs. They are doomed to disappointment. The question, in most cases, is: Are our college graduates good enough for the jobs which are awaiting them? Have they it in them to measure up the opportunities latent in the jobs they can secure? Ask Cesar of the Waldorf?

A Word to the State Street Quarterbacks ↑ ↓ The Business of Field Generalship And Its Hazards

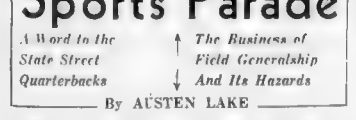
By AUSTEN LAKE

One can sympathize with Mr. George Marshall's frenzied folk dance after he had watched his Redskin professionals lose to an inferior Pittsburgh eleven at Fenway Park last Sunday. Because George has a tidy investment marked up in the young heaves who wear his satin pants, woolen jerkins and gaudy traps. He has paid smartly for the privilege of flailing his arms and givin' off agonized soul-noises as his men capered like a chorus of Camby-Hale dancers, each admiring his own physical perfection by studying his shadow.

Unlike a college graduate-manager, George has no obligation to parents, trustees or alumni, for he is papa, mama and a body-master to the handsome young animals who have hired their persons at a price. So he clawed the air and cackled as the Redskins sifted through the crowd toward their dressing quarters, each man looking as guilty as a youngster with his wrist caught in his mother's cookie crock.

But, my friends, the State Street quarterbacks who are now uttering low throaty growls at Harvard's mistaken generalship, Dartmouth's faulty offense and Yale's lack of defense, are quite another matter. For the S. S. Q., which is to college football what the Grandstand Managers are to major league baseball, have no tangible investment in their colleges and little or no knowledge of the technique of putting a team on the field.

"Swede" Nelson of the Harvard staff, for example, has a routine answer to discontented lay critics who winnie in his ear: "What are the dimensions of a football field?" asks Swede as the Jee Alumnus invariably rocks back on his heels and confesses that he has never heard.



"See?" barks Swede, quick to follow his advantage. "You don't know one of the elemental facts and yet you squawk about lack of generalship."

The Secret of Great Quarterbacking

Now I confess that, although my mental garret is stored with all sorts of stray jim cracks, mostly rubbish, it has never occurred to me that the dimension of a football field is a useful bit of information except to a groundskeeper, and I will guarantee you that four out of five college football coaches cannot tell you the prescribed width of a gridiron.

One of the game's famous quarterbacks Harry Stuhldreher, once confessed that his reputation as a play-picker was based on the footsiness of his ball-hearing mates, Jim Crowley, Elmer Layden and Edgar Miller. "You have no idea the mistakes those fellows covered up for me," said Harry. "Your little sister, Minnie, could have called signals for that gang and he named for Collier's All-America the end of the season."

And there was the time in a Penn-Cornell game some years back, when Bert Bell called for an off tackle play, realizing too late that it was fourth down, instead of third, and eight yards to go.

"As the ball was snapped my whole life paraded before my eyes," related Bert, "I saw myself disgraced, shunned by my classmates, an outcast in Philadelphia society. 'That's the bird who pulled the hone in the Cornell game,' people would point me out. I'd have to leave home and take a false name."

Nig Berry, Penn's great all-round athlete, took the ball on a plunge against the tackle, splitting Cornell's flank like an ocean liner cleaves a wave. A yard at a time he waded down field, shaking off tacklers as a wet dog shakes the water from his fur. And when, at length he came to earth, it was first down Penn with a yard to spare. Bert, meanwhile, stood with his soul in his eyes breathing a prayer, "Dear Lord, please let him make the distance."

The Width Between Glory and Chagrin

At the moment Boston foothall intellectuals are singing the praises of Jocko Stangle, Dartmouth quarterback who called the running play that sent Bill Clark on his 54 yard run through Harvard's pass-defense for a touchdown. Smart judgment say the critics. Which is as maybe. Smart judgment said the critics when Connie Mack astounded the baseball world by pitching Howard Ehmke against the Cubs in the opening game of the 1929 World Series. Smart judgment said the boys when Bo McMillin started around Harvard's right end at the Stadium in 1921 and suddenly deserted his interference in mid-flight to romp for a touchdown around the other. Smart because each of these gambles were successful, although at least two of them were sucker risks that might have put the hoob brand on the makers.

The margin between humhood and heroism in athletics is often of microscopic fineness. I give you Dave Hedges' experience in the Harvard Dartmouth game of last year when he was running clear in the Harvard end zone, a perfect mark for a Dartmouth pass. And the pass caught the lad a wee mite off center so that it tipped his frantic fingers and, after hanging uncertainly, slipped to the ground. An inch more to the right and the name of Hedges would have been written in goldleaf among Dartmouth's immortals.

I am not scourging the State Street quarterbacks, most of whom are tea-cosy athletes who have never known the thrill of shedding their personal skins or severing an artery for dear old varsity. I am pleading for tolerance toward the tow-headed, apple-cheeked and unsalaried lads who are trying to pull tricks from their headguards under fire from thirty thousand witnesses. Remember, you were once a barefoot lad!

I am thinking of the triple pass that Fordham tried on the threshold of St. Mary's (Cal.) in 1930, which was smeared for a four yard loss as the game ended. As the late Frank Cavanaugh left the Polo Grounds, a well intentioned alumnus caught step and said, "Cav, that quarterback pulled an awful blunder. I feel sorry for your sake."

"Well," said the Major, "I signalled from the bench for that play personally."

EX-WINTHROP HIGH BOY WINS HARVARD QUARTER BERTH

BOB HALEY MAY DIRECT TEAM SATURDAY

By BILL GRIMES

Although Harvard is much concerned over the loss of Fred Moseley, who broke his ankle yesterday in a scrimmage and the season's injury which will keep Captain Whitney on the side lines for 10 days, Bob Haley is the one player who now holds their undivided attention.

After the Holy Cross game during which Tanny Wells forgot to bring out the new Crimson offense, Haley was groomed to start at quarter back against Dartmouth. During one of the scrimmages Haley came up with a heavy load and much to the surprise of everyone Stanton Whitney rested the starting assignment for the Big Green confab.

WINTHROP HIGH BOY

Young Haley is a football player and make no mistake about it. He is a product of Winthrop high school and was an all scholastic quarterback. He finished his prep school days at Worcester Academy but has never been able to get started at Cambridge until this season. Haley knows what the field general's job is all about and was doing a fine job with his charges against Dartmouth until someone got in his way and sent Wells in to heave a pass.

Tommy Locke's touchdown was made possible by a piece of clever execution on the part of Bob Haley. If ever a player came through under pressure Haley did against the Indians, especially on the pass to Locke. Few veterans would have been able to invent more deception in a play than did Haley as he drifted back, drawing Embry, the Green wing, in until Locke was free. Just as Embry started to take a shot at him Haley flipped a pass to Locke and away raced the Crimson speed boy for a touchdown.

As soon as it was apparent to the coaches that Whitney was not getting the proper amount of drive into the Harvard team, Haley was dispatched into the Dartmouth game. He had not had any real varsity competition but he had been through the mill at Winthrop and Worcester Academy. The Crimson began to click as soon as Haley entered the game and it stumped as quickly when he retired.

WELLS PLANS TEST

Other than his passing Wells has been of little value to Crimson. He might as well be considered as if connected to some bench back berth other than a quarterback. He has the speed but we doubt the power to be a good blocker from his selection of attack. Wells has been questionable this season. At 20 pounds lighter than Haley he is considerably less the man. He lacks experience and a cool head which characterizes the value of players whom he follows. Wells is capable of scintillating flashes but seems to go out of his own.

Only a few more days remain before Harry Jack Hale and his starting quintet, but Hale and Coach Red Rolfe are letting the remaining days slip by.

From now until Thursday Coach Rolfe has the services of Howard Hale, who is not expected to start the game, and there is worry for the opportunity to get some valuable lines of the reserves.

Just about the time Hale was announced that Red Mosley had been put for the season. It turns out that Ben Tompkins and Vince Horween would join the Harvard coaching staff and lend a helping distance towards putting the varsity squad for Yale. Tickets will report for duty next week. It is between will not come Friday but next week of the Yale game.

In the event that Jack Horween suggested any starting changes there is a dimness of information. The regulars will be more or less at the mercy of the scrubs play best suited to the material.

It now seems certain that Al Lans and Bob Buell will be the starting halfbacks as Nov. 11 opens its next game with Tufts, opponent at Huntington [illegible] Saturday, Nov. 11. Arnold College is next in line.

Under the floodlights of the [illegible] st. gridiron, Coach McCoy is putting his charges through stiff drills in blocking and tackling and he is certain that these departments in which his teams was woefully weak all season, will show a decided improvement, as the year of varsity play counts to an end.

Lans has fought his way up from the scrubs, and now seems [illegible] man to replace Larry Templeman in the right halfback position Templeman is obliged to give up due to an injury, but Lans has enough class to win the Arnold greeting award on merit alone.

Buell has been knocking on the door of the other halfback post all season, and finally wins his reward for his excellent all-round play against Norwich last Saturday. Under Coach McCoy his punting is greatly improved, and his blocking and tackling is as good as that of any other member of the squad.

[illegible] Lans and Buell, [illegible] Templeman, have starred all season.

WELLESLEY HIGH'S FOOTBALL SQUAD USES WARNER SYSTEM

ILL'S ELEVEN CLICKS LIKE COLLEGIANS

By BILL CONNELL

A small edition of a Colgate football team, with its flossy attack clicking smoothly, is making new football history for Wellesley High this season.

There's a reason. He is Joe Hill, last year All-American guard at Colgate, who took Wellesley football under control this year. The school hadn't won a grid game for two years. This year it topped Millis, trailed Lexington, then slammed Natick, Dedham and Milton High. From a zero percentage to .800 batting average in one year.

WAS COLGATE STAR

Hill played guard for three years at Colgate, and was a standout on the champion eleven of '32. He was a member of the East team which played the West after the conclusion of the regular season. This year he was signed to teach the Wellesley eleven, in place of Herbert Snow, faculty director of athletics and physical education at Wellesley. Snow had been building a foundation for a real physical ed program in the town, and he couldn't give it any more time to coaching.

The new coach installed the Colgate, or Andy Kerr, or Pop Warner system (one and the same thing) with its double wingbacks, spinners and reverses. The record proves his ability to teach the lessons he had learned so well. Hill doesn't take the credit. Let him tell it.

LEARNED WARNER PLAY

"The Wellesley boys are smart," he said today. "They grasped the system and plays much more rapidly than I had dared hoped. They've been outweighed in seven games, lost two, and through brains and courage."

Capt. Paul Nahass, left halfback, is the team's ace and one of the best of the schoolboy backs. Can pass, kick, run and block. The other halfback, Forrest MacIntosh, is a new gridman, but can block. The other end stands out on defense, Fullback Austin McCourt, 160 pounder, is a junior, carries well and is a brilliant punter. A good all-around line, though he hasn't done much in this line.

FERIOLI ACE END

Center Don MacNeil, 170 pounder, is the fastest boy on the squad. Very fast. Right guard Dick Miller has been improving and his blocking of a Belmont High game was a very important part of Wellesley's victory.

Joe Tartari, right tackle, a new gridman, has become a good blocker and defensive tackle. Archie MacLean, veteran end, completes the first team roster.

The squad started with 25 boys but shrank rapidly, as is usual by the wayside. A few of the regulars went looking among their friends for material. The squad swelled to 30. And Tartari, Fair and Mather of the first team were among those culled by the squad's scouts.

Among the better subs are Bill Boyd, (end); George Conant and George Marshall, tackles (an injured ankle is keeping him idle for a week); Leo Chaisty, halfback, and Robert Neyland, quarterback. And Louis Bilia, Leland Johnson and Harold MacMahon, ends; George Lupien, Harold Stewart, Lowell, back (has been ineligible; O. K. now); Carl Salvi and Al Juliano, backs; Arthur Bruce McCourt, quarterback, who is a younger brother of Fullback Austin.

FIELD IS POOR

Wellesley works under disadvantages. The team has no enclosed field. Hence a very small gate. But Herbert Snow has done a great job in advancing the physical education program in the town. He has nine teams in junior high, and a J. V. eleven, all equipped.

The new town field could be made into a fine layout, but at present it lacks a fence, the ground (there's no turf) is very hard. The team practices at Hunnewell playground and plays at the poor town field.

But the team is rolling along well, despite the handicaps, under Coach Hill, with James Robertson handing the Jayvees, and Snow ironing out the budgeting woes.

Wellesley Grid Shift Expected

Franklin, Winchester, Medfield, and, on Thanksgiving, Needham at Wellesley are ahead for the latter school's grid team which has hopes of toppling each of these foes. The Rams with Needham is listed at Town Field, but because of the poor condition of the latter area the tilt may be shifted to Needham.

French Heavy Wins

Present Day Pugilists Poor Lot, Says Menke

By FRANK G MENKE

Vince Dundee now is champion of all the middleweights and that is the tipoff as to what low estate this knuckle-dusting business has flopped.

Dundee, a battle-scarred veteran, who has taken many cuffings from comparatively mediocre gents, was good enough to outstab and out-prance Lou Brouillard, who was touted as "a great champion," yet blew his crown in the first defense.

There isn't a good middleweight in the land. What's true of that class is true of most of the others.

Primo Carnera, who got that way by devious means, proved by his miserable showing against Paolino that he belongs to the volunteer fire department.

Maxie Rosenbloom has been champion of the light heavies for quite a spell. He has been beaten by guys, but was careful in advance to mention that the title was not at stake. Now they are going to pit him against Mickey Walker.

McLARNIN INACTIVE

No matter who wins, the sad, sad news is that Jimmy McLarnin has quit the wars.

The veteran Jimmy McLarnin, boss of the welters by decree not seen in the ring for a year, about it, Pop Foster, his manager got a notion a while ago that it was worth $50,000 to display Jimmy at work, but with things as they are Jimmy will have a long, long beard before anybody in the fish game coddles a sting with that sort of cash.

Barney Ross is a champion who is a champion.

Whipped a keen fighter when he took the long from Tony Canzoneri and proved it wasn't a fluke by taking him on again and pasting him more brutal than ever.

But there's nobody for Barney to fight. Not a lightweight in harness worthy of a crack at the throne.

CHOCOLATE HAS SKIDDED

Kid Chocolate, who had skidded amazingly, is boss of the feathers for no other reason than he's the best of a bunch of jabberwockers.

One is informed that Panama Al Brown is the bantam champion.

Midget Wolgast is chieftain of the flyweights.

That's because there are only about five or seven bantams and flyweights still around loose, and most of them are grandpaps.

Looking over the entire group, there's just about one match that would stir pulses and excite the natives to little. That's Carnera versus Baer. It'll be next summer or a year from then before that happens—if ever.

CURTIN TO CALL YALE SIGNALS

New York, Nov. 1 (AP)—Dartmouth has been trying for 48 years to beat Yale at football, but Reg Root, youthful head coach of the Big Green, is relying solely on the operations of this famous ping to keep the Indians from their first victory over the Blue this Saturday.

Instead, he has subjected the Eli crew, so soundly trounced by Army, to a thorough shaking-up and most of the changes may tick. The most important shifts involved the backfield, where Tommy Curtin, hitherto used exclusively as first-string substitute for Bob Lassiter, captain and halfback, was sent to quarterback. This scheme will put the Elis' two best ground gainers in the same backfield. Andy Callan retains the fullback post, but Jim Whitehead has replaced Stan Fuqua at right half.

Root tried two end tackles, Sid Swan and Serge Tarleton, and two new guards, Ken Grosseup and Web Davis, yesterday in an effort to improve a line badly outplayed by the light cadet forwards last week. Whether all four, or any one of them, will start against Dartmouth, remains to be seen.

Dartmouth, somewhat lucky to tie Harvard last week, hopes for a better offense now that two injured backfield aces, Jack Hill and Sammy Fishman, are recovering.

Yale began its rivalry with Dartmouth by shellacking the Indians 113 to 0 in 1884, and in the 15 games played since then the best Dartmouth could earn were ten ties of 1924, 1930 and 1931.

The most famous of these, of course, was the 1931 battle which ended in a 33 to 33 deadlock after one of the most spectacular games on record. Trailing 26 to 10 at the half, Dartmouth got a draw by rounding 23 points in the second half, mostly on the work of the Indians' great passing combination of Bill Morton to Bill McCall.

Minneapolis, Nov. 1 (AP)—The list of undefeated players in the national pocket billiard tournament will be reduced by at least one today when William Mosconi of Philadelphia clashes with Charles Summerell, Little Rock, Ark.

MISS JACOBS TRAINS HERE

Miss Alona Friend's visit to California during the past month.

Ingalls remarks anent Miss Jacobs' play follow:

"Without a doubt, she is the fastest girl player I have ever seen on a tennis court, yet she never seems to be in a hurry. She gets every shot tossed to her, yet she manages to send them back so that they are practically unplayable.

"In her match with me I certainly realized the differences in our ages, her 24 against my 41. Her crosscourt backhand shots, both up the line and across the court, were accurate to inches.

"Her service has much more power than when I played with her some two or three years ago.

"Helen's game is now very similar to that of Helen Wills' when the latter was champion. The new titleholder has brought up the power of her game almost to an unbelievable degree both in her serving overhead and drive.

"Having witnessed Mrs. Moody time and time again, I would be willing to go on record that if the two meet again in next year's national singles' final, Miss Jacobs will show a convincing superiority."

B. C. HIT HARD BY INJURIES

Paul Donahue is the latest addition to the Boston College line which from week to week bears no resemblance to that which was lined up the week before.

It now appears fairly certain, that Donahue, 175-pound Junior from Boston English High, will start at guard, in place of Dave Cushing, recently promoted regular, who received a badly smashed and broken nose in a scrimmage on Monday.

Never in recent years has the Boston College team been the victim of a number of injuries which have made Joe McKenna's task of coaching a nightmare this fall.

His injured and sick list is almost as great as the squad reporting daily for practice at Alumni Field and, when the Eagles stack up against Georgetown on Saturday, a lineup of players, many of whom were almost overlooked at the start of the season, will take the field.

Donahue played left guard in sessions since Monday and looks to have all the makings of an outstanding player provided he gains enough confidence to capitalize on his ability.

The return of Flavio Tosi to his duties at right end is just one of the brightest bits of news at the Heights of recent weeks.

Tosi is rated one of the out-standing ends of the country and according to advance predictions is already in line for All-America honors.

Chain Gang Grid Players Nicknamed Expressively

Moundsville, W. Va., Nov. 1 (AP)—The more listing of the names of members of this football team sends shudders through opponents. The team:

Grapevine (open field runner), Spitball (forward passer), Knock-out (guard), Steamshovel (fullback), Sneak (quarterback), Moon-eye (end and pass catcher), Express (halfback), Two-Gun (combines of a triple-threat man), Mingo, Six Months, Daisy, 16-Jewel Blinker and Battler (who probably will be ousted from the game).

The men are on the West Virginia State Penitentiary team which meets the Moundsville Eagles tonight, and the names are actual nicknames.

Intrieri Is Latest Grid Find of Redskins

By DAVID F. EGAN

Despite the fact that the Boston Redskins are practically out of the professional football championship, they are strengthening their team week by week.

Mario Intrieri, said to be one of the outstanding linemen of the Stapletons, has joined the club and will be ready for action next Sunday afternoon, when the Redskins meet the world champion Chicago Bears at Fenway Park in the outstanding professional embroglio of the season.

Intrieri was signed this week by Manager Dean Sensanbaugh after he had learned that the Signor can play either guard or center and plays these positions with no end of vim and vigor.

Lone Star Dietz, coach of the Redskins, is counting on Intrieri to help bolster the forward wall which was somewhat weakened by the loss of Ray Flaherty, Jack Hinkle and Ed Matesic.

BLASTS GUARDS

In other words, he is putting his finger on some of the guards and centers who are employed by the management of the Redskins, or the Pittsburgh Pirates, last Sunday, when the Redskins were at least three touchdowns superior, did not improve Dietz's disposition the least little bit.

He threw out a hint that the only lineman on the squad entitled of his job is Jack Riley, who rates for Herb F. Fabes Boyer on his spare moments. Riley played the complete game against Pittsburgh last Sunday, and is ready to go the full 60 minutes against the Bears.

Middy Dennis Shea, incidentally, broke out this morning with a most execrable pun. "We are playing the Bears," he said, "and we are loaded for bear. Heh heh to you, Mr. Shea.

Ray Flaherty, the only undefeated and untied team in the league, and they must be either that or thereabouts, A person named Harold "Red" Grange is on the roster. At one time, they say, he owned a number of cars. Is back for the University of Illinois and the jersey is still tacked to the wall in the locker room out in Illinois.

I don't know whether or not Grange is the greatest back that ever gained a yard of open ground. Certainly he ranks among the greatest of them all, and most certainly he, in co-operation with a gentleman entitled C. C. Carlisle and Carey Pyle, rambled and more on his football reputation than any other college player in the history of the game.

THE DEAR, DEAD DAYS

It was at that snooty era when everybody and his cousin was in the money. It was the period when the sports writers were inventing Four Horsemen, galloping Ghosts, and the like, and Grange went out into the open market after his illustrious career at Illinois, toured the country with a flock of hard-nosed professionals, stepped into the movies, jumped on the heavy gravy, and has never been in Now he is running a night-club in Chicago, and it is said that his football activities are simply to keep him in the lime-light so that he can do some more fancy plain and fancy capitalizing of his athletic reputation.

Though Grange may be all washed up, he has perhaps the greatest team with him that ever played football. They have scoured the other teams in the pro league with a running and passing attack that is said to be the last word in perfection. The Redskins, a month ago pushed them all over Soldiers Field in Chicago, only to lose when Jack Manders broke loose for a touchdown in the final period.

The appearance of Grange is a momentous event for New England football fans, but it hardly overshadows the battle that rages between the two greatest line-busters in modern football.

Battles Best Ground Gainer in Pro League

New York, Nov. 1 (AP)—Ruckers Goldenbarg of Green Bay has captured the lead in the race for individual scoring honors in the National Professional Football League.

The former Wisconsin star scored three touchdowns against Philadelphia on Sunday to boost his total points to 42, four point ashead of Ken Strong of the New York Giants and five ahead of Glenn Presnell of Portsmouth.

Presnell, incidentally, is reported Harry Newman of the Giants is one of the outstanding all-around backs in the circuit. The Nebraskan in addition to being a high scorer has kicked the most field goals and ranks up with Goldenbarg in passing and ground gaining.

Benny Friedman of Brooklyn has taken a tight lead in the passing race with 27 completions in 50 attempts. Newman has gained the most ground with aerials, 484 yards.

Cliff Hoyt, battle of Rochester leading the ground gainers, has piled up 357 yards in nine games, as Bob Campbell, Chicago Cardinal pivot, accumulated 346 in the same 1933 season.

Luke Johnson of Northwestern and the Chicago Bears is ending Pass Master of Purdue and Thompson are the leading pass receivers. He has caught 12 passes and Mose

COACH CANNELL DEFENDS PLAY OF GREEN

Hanover, N. H. Nov. 1—Dartmouth's defensive play against Harvard Saturday was as good as you'll ever see," Coach Jack Cannell remarked here today as he reflected upon the Big Green's showing in the 7-7 tie game with the Crimson and began intensive preparations for the annual invasion of the gloomy Yale Bowl from which not one Dartmouth team has ever emerged victorious.

Although readily granting that the Big Green's offensive play against Harvard was shabby, the Dartmouth mentor maintained that the Greens had a potent, powerful ground attack notwithstanding. He attributed its failure to "click" to the fact that Dartmouth was unable to split open Harvard's defense with its aerial attack. As a result, Harvard's bunched defense of a six-man line with three men hawking the line accomplished the effect of a nine-man line and checked the Dartmouth offensive.

ADMITS PROTECTION BAD

The glaring defect of the Big Green's offensive play was the inadequate protection afforded the Dartmouth passer. Only in one picture was the time of the pass set by the Harvard ends more than Harvard's pass defense, Coach Cannell said.

The Dartmouth coach was high in his praise of his ends, whose defensive work prevented the speedy Harvard backs from making substantial gains on their much publicized end sweeps.

The return of Jack Hill, former Worcester Academy star and Dartmouth's leading triple-threat ace, boosted the Greens' scoring today and assured Dartmouth of having at nearly full strength for the Yale encounter. Hill's return will help to counteract the loss of the fleet footed Wilbur "Doc" Lewis of Newtonville who is out of the Yale game with a badly battered knee which resulted from the hard defensive play of Harvard's Arthur Chase, Dwyer and Mike Ritter. A substitute guard who has a partially dislocated shoulder, are the only injured players.

HILL PUNTING ACE

Hill, who was out of the Harvard game with a bad ankle injury, is Dartmouth's best kicker and passer and his services appear to be sorely needed for Dartmouth's punting has very poor against Harvard. Rolly Morton's boots scarcely carried 30 yards, but Cannell excused Morton's poor showing on the grounds that the Harvard ends were coming in too fast and Morton was not given sufficient protection to enable him to get off the 50 and 60-yard boots he has been making in practice.

HARPER HOLDS DESTINY OF RAMBLERS

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 1 (AP)—High purposes and ideals have their vital place in the football scheme of things at Notre Dame, as elsewhere, but the big payoff is based on the results. Any athletic director or coach who says otherwise is merely speaking for effect and not saying what he thinks.

Nowhere is this more keenly realized now than under the present surface of athletic affairs at Notre Dame. The triumphs of the Four Horsemen and Knute Rockne have made the school nationally famous, its football system a byword, its disciples in demand all over the country and made possible the building of a great modern stadium.

This brings us into the picture now under consideration, the diplomatic corps" of Notre Dame athletics. It was first organized by Jesse Harper, a Dartmouth man, who coached grid teams in West Point in 1923 the team that featured the Davis-Locke-Merillat backfield combination and first directed material attention to the university's football product.

HARPER MADE ROCKNE

Harper was instrumental in having Rockne installed as head coach in 1917, despite the misgivings of faculty executives who considered Rock too inexperienced and un-Irish in some exasperation, Harper was asked why he objected to all other candidates for the coaching job and insisted upon Rockne.

"Because I promised him the job, and I believe there was no further debate about it.

The story of Rockne as coach, one in which Harper played so prominent a role as diplomat extraordinary, is too well known to require extended outline. Now Harper is back in the saddle as athletic director on Notre Dame's insistence. He will stay there until he sees the present job through the mess and everybody else satisfactory.

Following Harper's advice, Rockne set out to truly built up the prestige of fine football teams, but established the policy of playing the most representative teams of the country. When Rock died, leaving a lot of connections in the way of games, Harper set about to straightened things out, revised old contracts and made some new ones.

HARPER KEY-MAN

It is fair to say that Notre Dame's relationships from coast to coast are better than they have been strengthened and extended. Harper was instrumental for example in avoiding a threatened rupture between army and Notre Dame, growing out of some roughness in the game won by the Irish at the Yankee Stadium last season, there were a few reverberations, but only those on the inside realize at the time how much feeling existed and how close these famous rivals were to going their separate ways.

"We are not disturbed by the trend of events at Notre Dame," the athletic head of one of the biggest rivals of the Irish remarked recently. "We have every confidence in Harper. Our relations with Notre Dame have always been on the highest plane. It is not for us to be concerned with the solution of internal problems there."

STOCKS HEAVY IN LAST HOUR OF TRADING

New York, Nov. 1.—Pivotal shares showed a heavy tone in the final hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange today, aside from some of the mining issues. U. S. Smelting was up more than four points.

American Telephone, Chrysler, U. S. Steel and Westinghouse Electric were off, along with Consolidated Gas of New York.

The R. F. C. marked up its gold buying price to $2.38 an ounce, up 14 cents from yesterday, giving the dollar an indicated value of around 66 cents. This affected the dollar in foreign exchange dealings and it slipped under 66 cents in terms of gold currencies.

The power output figures were somewhat better but steel production was down considerably.

The market started off on a quiet and firm note with the majority of issues showing the previous close. The buying in the mining group became apparent after the opening and the list pointed upward for a while.

Stocks to make the poorest showing were the steels, rails and public utilities. Rails were under some pressure but price changes were mostly minor.

The liquor shares held well. Oils were steadier.

In the first hour advances of one to two points were scattered over the list. U. S. Smelting gained over two points along with National Distillers. Homestake mounted 10 points following setting a new high on U. S. gold output at $32.26 against $32.12 yesterday.

Point or more gains came for McIntyre Porcupine, Dome Mines, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Schenley, Corn de Pasco, American Can, Case, American Commercial Alcohol, Goodyear, American Smelting, Dupont, Du Pont and General Foods.

Declaration of regular preferred dividend for U. S. Steel was expected, so had little effect with the common changing around at fractional advances.

Sales to 11a. m. approximated 810,000 shares.

In the second hour wheat broke two cents a bushel and brought selling into shares. Early gains were cut down and a number of issues showed small net losses. Support came on the dips, as speculative sentiment appeared inclined to be bullish.

Mining shares gave a strong demonstration, aided by the fresh rise in gold here and abroad and revival of reports that the administration was planning some action to aid silver.

Sales to noon approximated 890,000 shares.

In the third hour irregularly lower prices ruled. Air Reduction, American Smelting, U. S. Smelting and National Dairy gained a point or better. Point or more declines came for International Harvester, American Telephone, Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central and U. S. Leather "A."

Libbey-Owens, Pullman, North American, Standard Gas, Standard of New Jersey and California, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak and First National Stores showed slight advances.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 490,000 shares.

In the fourth hour price changes were irregularly lower. Allied Chemical was down more than 2 points; U. S. Smelting was up 2¾ and U. S. Industrial Alcohol gained 1¾. U. S. Steel ascended a major fraction.

Homestake was off 4. Point or more declines came for American Can, American Tobacco "B," Celanese, Delaware & Hudson, Consolidated Gas, Johns-Manville and Brooklyn Union Gas. Loss of 2½ in Telephone was down over 2 points.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 810,000 shares.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

Copyright, 1933, by the Boston Evening American.

Since Wall Street was able to make New York City back down by threatening to move to New Jersey, we're afraid the nation is in for no end of trouble.

The next time Congress wants to investigate, the boys will probably open negotiations for a barge anchored twelve miles out.

And Bob Fender growls—
I hope more than her share of bad luck attends
The gal who signs off with:
"But, can't we be friends?"

THE YOUNGER GENERATION

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat—40 years ago.)

We understand that a number of young men were out in the street Monday evening, grabbing at the handles of the bicycles as the wheelmen rode by. One man was thrown to the ground and injured his bicycle. These boys have wheels of their own and ought to have more sense than to act this way. If they have not, they ought to be kept indoors. We would give their names if we knew them.

Small Janey, at her mother's tea,
For napkins passed 'round lingerie.
"It looks," said Ma, "like many a slip,
"Today betwixt the cup and lip."

Lillian Levy.

Revise—
One man's meat is another man's spinach.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Aunt Bella:
I am to be married very soon and I expect to wear a black suit. What color tie and socks do you think I should wear? Lester.

Ans. — Congratulations to you, Lester. But, right now, I'm afraid you are a little nervous and upset and in no fit shape to worry about haberdashery. So wouldn't it be better if we just waited until you're all settled down, and then you can give Auntie B. a ring and we'll go out and see what we can find for you. A. ("Cheerio") Bella.

DAILY DOUBT

"Farmers of 50 are just as willing to take up new methods as younger men."—Prof. H. C. Sherman of Columbia University.

And maybe the bankers would be more cheerful about guaranteeing each other's deposits if the American people at large would guarantee each other's collateral.

And Ralph Zenthen arises to remark that:
The kind of girl I hate the most
Is she that likes a wiener roast.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Madame Bella:
I was indeed surprised at the story you told the other night after I had recklessly invited you to the home of a friend. Ain't you never been in a polite society before?
Outraged.

Ans.—I'm sorry, kiddo. It was a little old, but Annie B. thought it was still dirty.

SUCCESS NO. 3245

This, friends, is Prof. Mediocre A. Donkes who, after spending years in an obscure cubby-hole of the U. S. Weather Bureau, has skyrocketed to fame and fortune in Hollywood. Before Prof. Donkes came along moom pitcher dance directors were at the end of their string. Musical pictures had been made in which girls' legs represente. stars, pinwheels and zipper fasteners. But there just seemed to be no new leg patterns for birds-eye camera angles. The dance directors were nuts, naturally. Then someone thought of Prof. Donkes, who had spent the next to best years of his life studying the patterns of 867,000,000 snowflakes—all different. He was hired on the spot, and can be seen any day picking his teeth in front of the Brown Derby and wearing a beret.

The blessing of the farmer they are obvious and many;
Of people better placed than he, there simply are not any.
Just think of all the exercise and sun and good fresh air
He gets by having land to till, and tilling it for fair!
In fact, when'er I meditate upon the farmer's lot
I cannot comprehend at all why he's so often hot
Beneath the collar and so full of groans and growls and hisses,
When he should really spend his time in throwing flowers and kisses.
Normality, health, happiness—to him they all be given,
If he will merely do the work it takes to make a livin'.
And since he is so glum so mad, so anguished and blue, it must be that, try as he may he simply cannot do it.

Great Power in Pictures

Words Cannot Compare With Them

THIS WAS A FOREST

You need not be told that these are war pictures and you need no words to tell what they mean.

Look down at the last picture, photograph of a soldier, name unknown, one of millions that lay as he lies here, a tribute to the efficiency of big guns, little guns, machine guns, shrapnel, poison gas and human brutality.

To add words to these pictures is futile. You SEE what was once a forest, every tree stripped bare and killed by cannon fire. You could build a city, or establish thousands of prosperous farms with the millions that were poured into this one forest in the shape of ammunition.

THIS WAS A CHURCH

THIS WAS A HOME

And so of the other two pictures—"This Was a Home" and "This Was a Church." The war came, and all that was left of home and church you see here.

What is the use of words urging peace if pictures such as these cannot affect the dull human mind?

What is the use of broadcasts by the President, urging nice ladies to continue their noble work for peace?

The thing for this country to do is to push the important and badly neglected work of national defense, that these pictures may not be duplicated here, in the United States, by airplanes sent across either ocean.

THIS WAS A MAN

These four pictures are selected among hundreds contained in a most valuable book called "The First World War," edited by Laurence Stallings, published by Simon and Schuster, of New York City. Every man who went into the big war should have this book to show to younger men. It answers as no words, no preaching ever could, the question "WHAT WAS THE WAR"?

New York Day by Day

Girl, Music Shows Back

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—Broadway in the 50's becomes amazingly rejuvenated with the return of the prodigal Winter Garden to girl and music shows. For a number of years the famous old house with its runway has been treated like the unwanted step-child. Much of the time dark.

Now and then it would flaunt its block-long signs of this movie and the other. But the customers were few—and mostly out-of-towners.

O. O. McIntyre

The real New Yorker was too saddened by the sacrilege. For in its day the Winter Garden, as jovially common as it was, was a high spot of the town.

Gaby Desleys, Delysia and many other European charmers were exploited there. As well as local sex appealers such as Kitty Gordon. Most conspicuous of all the Winter Gerden alumni was Al Jolson. Here on his knee he first yammered his "Mammy" song. The Howard brothers won fame there.

The Winter Garden had real continental flavor. It was the first to permit general smoking, ladies included, in all parts of the house. The Sunday night "concerts," also revived, brought the most all-Broadway gathering ever herded before or since.

No pianist since Paderewski has so captured music lovers of the town as Jose Iturbi. A movie sheik type with slumbering Valentino eyes, ivory skin, and enraptured lady critic wrote of "his wonderful fingers dipped in stardust." Iturbi is a Valencian and his concerts are entirely from memory. Few matinee idols have brought out such a gathering of soulful, sighing maidens.

De luxe speaks now serve $2.50 dinners that could not be purchased elsewhere for less than $5. That is if the patron goes to the bar first with a sizable party for a setting of cocktails. These are $1 a copy. And while the glow is in full effulgence the wine card is presented—and few refuse to cut into the grape.

Another play-pretty is ordering at the bar from a huge chalked menu on a blackboard paraded behind the mahogany by a uniformed toter. By the time some of the diners retire from the bar to tables it is presumed they cannot see the fine print of the ordinary menu—and are not likely to be running a fever over food anyway.

Perhaps the most celebrated of the restaurateurs since the George Rector days is George Lemaze, who as a roaring bonfiace may be 'cund in Pa'm Beach, Saratoga and Paris Avenue with the season. Like Oliver Peltz, Paris Ritz, he has the [illegible] touch, flutter of French phrases, a fusto for adding piquancy to the mixing of a salad dressing, ushering a steaming souffle or paying just the right sort of compliments to the ladies. He was a boyhood friend of Geo. M. Cohan in Providence.

Voltaire, in a random snippet, once said: "The flourish of a maitre de hotel at the proper interval does more to excite gastric juices than the rarest seasoning." There used to be a head waiter at old Sherry's who would swoop in advance to clear the table aisles for the arrival of the meat dish. He would lift the silver lid tenderly and stand transfixed as though facing some masterpiece fashion by Michelangelo. People with jaded appetites would find themselves suddenly wolfish.

Barney Ross is reputed to have gone to the most expensive tailor in New York two days after defending the lightweigh crown with Canzoneri and stocked up his wardrobe. And this sartorial orgy is the way most champions celebrate their victories. In the John L. Sullivan days, however, they went on a bender for a week or so—winding up with a thumping headache and a new set of resolutions. Jack Dempsey, who is now a heavy smoker, has always fought off a fondness for the weed. After his wins, he would wait 24 hours, enjoy a big steak dinner and a fierce black cigar. It was his idea of a big time.

Once the spotted black and white coach dog was a canine favorite in New York and a symbol of swank. About the only one left was trotting along the park side of upper Fifth avenue the other day. A companion of Earl Benham exclaimed. "Look a coach dog!" Replied Benham laconically: "Either that or a white pooch from Pittsburgh."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Letter to a Modern Husband

DEAR AL—

So it has happened. Here you are yelling all over the lot because the Missis hasn't turned out to be a Sweet, Meek Little Worm like Mama was.

Elsie Robinson

But what did you expect? Did you pick her because she was a Worm? Indeed you didn't. You picked her because she was a Snappy Number. She was a great scout—a Regular Fellow, like any man. She could outswim you, often outsmart you.

She knew how to wear her clothes. Also—and don't pretend, Big Boy, that this wasn't important data—SHE KNEW HOW TO EARN THEM. She had a good job, which she'd won in the face of plenty of competition.

For all these things you admired her. Yes, there were plenty of other girls you might have admired—nice timid, gentle girls who conformed exactly to that Meek-mousey pattern which seems to have such an appeal for you now. But you said you wanted a "live one." So you picked Estelle, who certainly was.

And now you're beefing. Why? Simply because Estelle still insists on being a "live one." But you no longer admire Snappy Numbers as you once did—not, at any rate, in a wife. Wives—"they oughta be different."

What do you mean, "different"? Well, of course, you don't mind if she goes on holding a job and carrying her share of the household expenses. In fact, it would raise heck with your payments on the new car and radio if she didn't go on holding that job. But why can't she be content to make a regular home for you after office hours, the way your mother did for your father?

Why, your father could settle down with his paper after supper and have a nice, long, restful evening. Ma wasn't always nagging at him to do something around the house. Ma didn't fly into a tantrum if he didn't help her with the housework. Housework—that's not a man's work anyway. Why should a man be expected to do a woman's work?

Ma wasn't always putting up an argument to Pa, either. She thought everything he did was jake. His word was law. Just like that lovely old song,

"OH, DO YOU REMEMBER SWEET ALICE, BEN BOLT;
"SWEET ALICE, WITH EYES SO BROWN?
"SHE WEPT WITH DELIGHT IF YOU GAVE HER A SMILE,
"AND TREMBLED WITH FEARS AT YOUR FROWN?"

Yes, Ma was like that. And she couldn't do enough for Pa. Look at the Wonderful Sunday Dinners Ma used to get up! Fricasee chicken, hot biscuits, three kinds of pie, couple of cakes—worked most of Saturday and nearly all Sunday morning so everything would be swell.

But can you get one of these Modern Wives to do anything like that? Try and do it!

So you're "fed up with marriage." And "if you'd known it was going to be like this, you'd never have gone into it." And what do I think?

I THINK YOU HAVE THE HELLUVA NERVE—YOU AND SEVERAL MILLION MORE MODERN YOUNG MEN.

Why can't you have all these little attentions which Ma gave Pa? Because you're getting a lot of little attentions—and important cash service—which Pa never dreamed of getting from Ma.

And the woman who gives you those services is a Real Two-Fisted Person. She has to be, or she could never hold her own in this modern world. She's a hard hitter, a quick thinker—and she needs a healthy amount of fun and freedom to keep her fit.

Evenings over the darning basket; Sundays over the kitchen stove? Did you mention that alluring prospect when you married her, Al? I'll say you didn't! You made your sale by representing yourself as a Regular Gypsy Lover.

THEN ACT LIKE ONE NOW!

You have, taking her by and large, the finest creature for a mate which the human race has yet developed. You may know together man-and-wife comradeship, a community in work and adventure, which the race has never experienced before. Follow her clicking heels, profit by her cool little head, and she'll make a man of you, my son.

BUT HAVE YOU WHAT IT TAKES?

Puerto Rico's Governor 'Unfortunate' Choice

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Against the administration of the Roosevelt governor of Puerto Rico, the students of the University of Puerto Rico have struck in protest.

This is only the latest of many manifestations of disapproval of Mr. Gore's appointment to this office. The other day, according to reports, an attempt was made to wreck the governor's residence.

If Mr. Gore's political ambition had been realized, he would not be governor of Puerto Rico today, an office from which he apparently possesses few, if any, qualifications. His ambition was to be United States commissioner of internal revenue—one of the most powerful political offices in the gift of the President.

When Mr. Gore's application for this office was rejected, an earnest effort was made to satisfy him with an office of lesser importance in the Treasury Department. But the one offered him he is said to have turned down, and he was finally given the governorship of Puerto Rico.

The people of Puerto Rico are well aware that the appointment of Mr. Gore is entirely political—in the nature of a reward for political service rendered. They know that this appointment was not recommended by those who had at heart the welfare of Puerto Rico. This is the reason why protests against the appointment are still made in spite of the fact that the Roosevelt administration is striving to pour oil on the troubled water by offering Puerto Rico assistance toward economic relief and recovery.

THE RESULTS

If Puerto Rico were a state of the Union, her senators and representatives in Congress would have something to say about the selection of her federal officials.

But Puerto Rico is dependent upon the President for the kind of governor she gets. And in the case of Mr. Gore, his appointment appears to have been dictated by the exigencies of Democratic politics rather than by the needs of Puerto Rico.

The result is that the people of Puerto Rico resent the use of their chief office for political purposes, and the administration loses much more in prestige by making such an appointment than the politicians can give in return for obtaining such a political plum.

Most of the governors of Puerto Rico have been selected because they appeared to be well qualified to administer intelligently, sympathetically and acceptably the governmeht of [illegible] island.

There was a lamentable exception to this rule during the Harding administration. A Kansas City politician, who had supported Mr. Harding's nomination for President when the leaders of Missouri were against him, earned the gratitude of Mr. Harding, who disregarded the welfare of Puerto Rico in order to reward his Kansas City supporter.

PROTEST BY PEOPLE

The result was a protest by the people of Puerto Rico, a loss of American prestige in the islands and a loss of prestige for the Harding Administration throughout the country.

Before Puerto Rico was finally rid of this incompetent governor, repercussions of this blunder were heard throughout Latin America.

Unfortunately the flare-up in Puerto Rico over the choice for governor comes on the eve of the convening of the seventh Pan-American Conference at Montevideo.

Of course the Pan-American republics have nothing to say about whom the government at Washington sends to San Juan to govern Puerto Rico. But the Puerto Ricans are spanish-speaking people. And the better governor they have, the better reputation the United States has among Spanish-speaking people to the south.

President Roosevelt has made so many excellent appointments, he has disregarded it completely, in many cases the inordinately greedy demands of the pork-barrel politicians of his own party, that in fairness to him it should be remembered that the way in which the Puerto Rican governorship was filled is an exception to the rule.

If only a sovereign state, instead of a dependent people, were the victims of this unfortunate selection, the blow to American prestige would not be so heavy.

Down of Prohibition Revives Japan's Oyster Industry—$10,000,000 Diamond 'Found' in Brazil

By Edwin C. Hill

The private life of the oyster has never sufficiently engaged the attention of scholars and philosophers. Yet the oyster is an interesting creature, well worth the study of the discerning. As prohibition disappears, oysters grow more popular, for they are the natural food that goes with beer and ale. From Japan comes the news that the curious industry called pearl-planting is the largest in years.

For many centuries men have industriously combed the oyster beds of the Persian Gulf, of Ceylon and of the South Seas for pearl-bearing oysters. Long before the seductive Cleopatra playfully tossed a magnificent pearl into a cup of vinegar, pearls were the spell about mankind, and especially his womankind.

JAPS INDUSTRIOUS

Then came the ingenious and industrious Japanese with their tweezers, knives and other instruments, to produce in the living oyster pearls which cannot be distinguished from the purely natural pearl without cutting the gem in half. They are genuine pearls, as truly as any pearl can be genuine, except that they are artificially stimulated.

This season the Japanese pearl experts placed three million pearl producing oysters on the operating table. Inserting a clamp between the shells of each oyster to keep them open, a tiny seed pearl or bead of mother of pearl was inserted into the live body of the oyster. Every oyster thus treated was placed in a wire cage and suspended, by means of rafts, in the waters of the bays, where they feed and grow and cover the tiny seed pearls with live oyster membrane and build them up into big pearls.

Twice a year the cages, which protect the living pearl-factories from octopuses and other natural enemies, are taken up and cleaned of parasitic growths. Seven years from now the oysters will be opened and the pearls will be removed. Twenty-five per cent will have practically perfect pearls of varying sizes.

The most famous oyster that ever lived was the Famous Whistling Oyster of London. Back in the thirties of the nineteenth century the keeper of a tavern in Drury Lane discovered that an oyster, reclining in a bed of brine, produced a whistling sound by inhaling and exhaling water through a hole in its shell.

WHISTLING OYSTER

The Whistling Oyster became a London celebrity. All the other notabilities of the town, including Dickens and Thackeray, went to the tavern to hear his performances and to tuck away in their insides multitudes of his less gifted brethren.

In this first month of the revival of oysters we might recall what Lowell made his Cambridge oysterman say: "When oysters are good they air good, and when they ain't they isn't!"

News from Brazil reports the finding of a huge diamond weighing 2000 carats, or almo.t a pound, one of the largest stones ever found. If of perfectly pure quality, it would be worth something like 10 million dollars.

The largest diamond ever found was the great Cullinan; weighed more than 3000 carats, or a pound and a third when it was taken from the yellow clay of the Premier mine in the Transvaal. The man who found it, Frederick Wells, received a gift of $10,000 from his employer, the government of the Union of South Africa presented it to King Edward the Seventh and, from smaller diamonds, the largest fragments now sparkle among the British crown jewels in the Tower of London.

There are many famous diamonds which have figured in history, though none so large as the great Cullinan. The Great Mogul is one of these. So is the Orloff, which was stolen by a French soldier from the eye of an idol in a Brahmin temple, bought by Prince Orloff for 90,000 pounds and presented to the Empress Catherine the Second. It was among the Russian crown jewels seized by the Bolsheviki.

The Kohinoor, now weighing 106 carats and set in the crown of King George, was once owned by Nadir Shah, the Persian conqueror, then passed into the hands of the East India Company which gave it to Queen Victoria.

MAGNIFICENT STONE

The Regent or Pitt diamond is a magnificent stone found in India or Borneo. It was bought by the Duke of Orleans, Regent of France, was stolen during the Revolution, but was recovered and is still in France. The Nizam, weighing 277 carats, is owned by the Nizam of Hyderabad, the richest man in the world.

The Sancy, was successively the property of Charles the Bold of Burgundy, of De Sancy, Queen Elizabeth, Henrietta Maria, Cardinal Mazarin and Louis the Fourteenth, and since then of the king of Spain, a Russian prince and an Indian Rajah.

The Hope diamond, owned by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean of Washington, and about which so many traditions of bad luck are associated, is probably the most famous of all colored diamonds. It is a beautiful blue and weighs more than forty-four carats.

All trinkets—which have cost hundreds of thousands of lives and changed the fate of nations.
